Jet Jettisons Fuel Tank on Fayette Farm

Alfred Hagler of Route 35 west couldn't believe his own eyes Friday afternoon.

And — fortunately for himself and everyone else concerned — his eyes were strong.

Hagler, a farmer, thought he saw a jet plane slip out of formation and crash into a neighboring wheat field. As it turned out, on investigation, it was only an empty auxiliary fuel tank from the bottom of one of the jets.

Shaped somewhat like a jet, the tank is about 12 feet long, cylindrical, and colored the same aluminum grey as the planes. Designed so it can be released if necessary, the tank was released by mistake as the plane flew overhead.

It landed in a field on the Orville Oty farm, near Hagler's, 300 yards from Oty's house. It was picked up and carted away by officials from Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, where the plane came from, and Sheriff Orland Hays.

Air Force officials said they were "plenty lucky" the tank was not full when it dropped. It could have caused a serious fire if it had been full and had exploded.

Lingering Case of Bankruptcy Fatal to Railroad at Age 80

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York, Ontario and Western Railway died at midnight Friday at the age of 80 after a lingering bankruptcy.

The cause of death: Her income couldn't catch up with her outgo.

Right to the end the mourners thought the little "Old and Weary" railroad would somehow recover. At the bedside was as staggering an array of creditors as any 541-mile line ever had.

Bigger railroads would have gulped at her $100 million pile of debts. She fought to the end.

The facts about her are quickly told: She ran from Oswego, N. Y., at the eastern end of Lake Ontario down to New York Harbor, with a few spur lines among them one to the hard coal fields around Scranton, Pa. The Midwest freight that she was built to handle from the lakes, back in the days of the bustle and the hat pin, died away. The hard coal business died away. Finally, she died too, 20 years after she went broke.

OVER THOSE 20 years a series of federal trustees tried to staunch the flow of red ink. She meandered through some of the prettiest mountains and lush farm lands in New York, but missed the major cities whose industries might have saved her.

New industries were chary of locating beside a railroad with one wheel in the grave. Automobiles cut into passenger travel. Milk tank trucks spelled the end of farmers' cans on way stations. And so it went.

Each year the debts grew worse, another million deeper in the red. Two receivers were appointed last month. With a quarter-million-dollar operating fund subscribed by the public, they were directed to show a profit in 60 days. The money ran out in 45 days. The "Old and Weary" was ordered laid to rest.

The odds against her survival may have endeared her to her bondholders who hadn't had a cent since 1935; to her 1000-odd employees who worked for lower wages; to the government which lent her money to buy new locomotives; to the banks which took pawn tickets on her.

They'll sell the locomotives and some of her tracks and stations to other railroads. What can't be sold will be torn up and scrapped.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles, setting forth some of the opinions of Juvenile Court Judge Robert L. Brubaker and others on juvenile delinquency, which loomed large in the public eye here this week. Today's article will deal with the nature and the causes of the problem here. A second article will discuss some of the possible solutions.

By JACK AYER

How many juvenile delinquents are there in Fayette County? And why?

One answer to the first question is fairly simple and somewhat reassuring: not as many as you might think!

The answer to the second is not simple at all. Psychologists admit they aren't sure what causes delinquency and layman's opinions are like shadows, seen through a glass darkly.

THE ATTENTION of parents throughout the county was focused on young people at the beginning of this week, when a mass clampdown on youthful crime here produced eight arrests in less than 48 hours.

But, disturbing as these arrests may be, law enforcement officers say that they shouldn't obscure the fact that there are still a lot of good kids in Fayette County. Mostly good kids, in fact.

"The real problem we're up against is not the present problem, but the potential one," Juvenile Court Judge Robert L. Brubaker told this reporter.

Chicago Judge Ponders Fate Of Reds' Baby

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago family court judge must decide whether a Russian-born couple should be given custody of their three sons, under court supervision since 1953, and take them to the Soviet Union.

George and Nabejda Kozmin, former Russian slave laborers who were married in a displaced persons camp in Germany, want to return to Russia. They want to take with them their sons, all born in the camp in Aschaffenburg, and a fourth son, who was born in Chicago and is an American citizen.

Russian embassy officials are aiding the couple in their fight to regain custody of their three sons. The boys were made wards of the family court in July 1953 when both parents entered Chicago State Hospital after mental breakdowns.

The three boys, Richard, 10, George, 8, and Paul, 7, live at a children's home in suburban Lake Villa. The other child, Peter, born last August, lives at home.

Edward J. Nead, chief Cook County probation officer, said the Kozmins, who came to this country in 1950 as displaced persons, sought to regain their son's custody last December but their appeal was turned down by Judge John H. Clayton Jr.

Nead described Kozmin as confused and embittered with America and unwilling or unable to recall anything pleasant about this country.

Labor Pondering Future for Beck

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of organized labor today awaited word on whether Dave Beck's Teamsters will back him or dump him in the wake of his suspension as an AFL-CIO chief.

Beck, president of the Teamsters Union, gave every appearance of fighting it out.

His troubles mounted on the heels of the AFL-CIO Executive Council's action Friday suspending him as one of its members and as an AFL-CIO vice president.

The council, top command of the 15-million member AFL-CIO, ordered a full scale investigation by the federation's Ethical Practices Committee into charges that Beck has brought "the labor movement into disrepute." This probe also would cover corruption allegations against several other high Teamsters officials, some of whom are under indictment.

MEANWHILE, Senate Rackets Committee sources said they are not "half through" investigating Beck's complex financial dealings, but may not call him back for quizzing unless he agrees to talk. They said other witnesses and documentary evidence could tell most of the story.

Against AFL-CIO Council's move the Beck came after he invoked his Fifth Amendment protection against possible self-incrimination in refusing to tell the Rackets Committee about his financial affairs. He said he turned to his personal lawyer. The Senate investigators say he turned to his personal use

Rayburn Advice To Be Heeded By President

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex) has told President Eisenhower that if he makes a personal request for "temporary presidency" legislation, people will think he plans to give up active presidential service.

An informed source, who declined to be quoted by name, said Rayburn told this to Eisenhower Friday during a White House conference with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders.

Eisenhower was said to have replied that he didn't see how such an inference could be drawn but will heed Rayburn's advice.

At this conference, Eisenhower proposed a constitutional amendment to authorize the Cabinet to decide by majority vote when the Vice President should assume temporarily the duties of a disabled President who was unable or unwilling to make the decision himself.

Rayburn opposed the idea strongly. Other congressional leaders voiced more guarded reactions, but none indicated enthusiasm for the Eisenhower plan.

THE INFORMANT who told of what went on at the conference said Eisenhower joined in a laugh that followed Rayburn's blunt expression of opinion. But Eisenhower is understood to have heeded more than $320,000 in Teamster funds.

If it follows past practice, the AFL-CIO Council is likely to give the 1½ million member union an opportunity to oust certain of its officers. The penalty for not doing so would be suspension from the giant federation.

Beck, who did not attend the Council meeting, reported in Seattle "I have nothing to say" about the action against him.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Friday Beck has been summoned to a hearing here May 20 to answer "for his actions in bringing the labor movement into disrepute and his failing to explain many charges against him with regard to misuse of union funds."

Beck's suspension from his AFL-CIO posts is effective pending the results of the May 20 hearing. These jobs carry no salary, but do allow for expenses.

BECK RAN into opposition Friday from a top official of the Teamsters Union. John English, secretary-treasurer of the union, said he was against Beck's announced plan for a million dollar publicity campaign.

English said "as long as I am the general secretary-treasurer of the international I will oppose any use of the union's funds for that purpose."

He challenged Beck's statement that the Teamster high command had already approved the publicity campaign. He said he hadn't been consulted.

Two More Juveniles Confess Burglaries

Confronted Friday afternoon with the accusations of Deputy Sheriff Donald Thompson, two 17-year-old Fayette County boys meekly admitted committing four separate city-county burglaries during the past few months.

Still held in Fayette County jail Saturday morning, the pair brought the total of young people taken into custody thus far this week to 10. It was the latest development in a mass city-county clampdown on juvenile crime.

Thompson arrested the boys at their farm homes Friday afternoon, after sifting and sorting the morass of information he has collected in nearly 60 interviews with young people during the past two weeks.

THE YOUTHS admitted break-ins at Hugh Matson's used car lot, N. North St.; the Lucas Town & Country Market, Route 22, west; and McCoy's N. North St. Market. They also admitted stealing three new tires from the rear of a parked auto in Bloomingburg.

Owner of the auto had not been determined Saturday morning. Small amounts of cash were stolen in the other three jobs.

Meanwhile, other new developments in the juvenile crackdown were coming thick and fast. Among them:

(1) DEPUTY THOMPSON was in New Holland Saturday, assisting Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Charles Felkey in his investigation of two breaks there Friday night.

(2) Juvenile Court Judge Robert L. Brubaker Friday took under advisement the cases of four juveniles arrested Wednesday in the city. Disposition will be made later.

(3) Answering complaints that have poured in since Sheriff Orland Hays slapped a 10-30 p. m. curfew on juveniles Thursday, Thompson announced that the curfew "wasn't meant to stop anyone from having an honest good time."

"Youngsters can stay at the movies or at places like that as long as they want. But when they go home, they should go home. Loitering will not be tolerated," Thompson said.

(4) Portsmouth law enforcement officers said that the three juveniles arrested here Monday, along with 18-year-old Roger Messbarger of Good Hope have admitted, in all, seven jobs in the Portsmouth area. The youths originally admitted only four.

ALL THE BREAK-INS were during a one-night stand March 9, Portsmouth authorities said. The youths made the swing in an auto driven by Messbarger, their alleged ringleader. They netted $40.

Burglars in New Holland Friday night apparently didn't get a thing for their troubles. Deputy Felkey said Saturday morning. They broke into Hill's Motor Sales, 25 Main St., and Kirk's Furniture Co., 9 W. Front St., rifled the office at each place, but apparently went away empty-handed, Deputy Felkey said.

Fingerprint tests at both places proved nothing, but officers were expecting a break anyway.

Deputy Thompson went to New Holland with the special permission of Sheriff Hays. The Pickaway County sheriff's office asked for his assistance because of his extensive investigations of juvenile break-ins.

EXPANDING his remarks on the curfew, Thompson said: "Any young person who has some worthwhile purpose on the street, or any one who can show that he's heading straight from one place to another won't have to worry. But youngsters just staying out with nothing to do will be hauled in."

"We won't just order them home," Thompson warned. "We'll bring them to the jail, a. d. tell their parents to come after them. We'll hold them there until they do so," he said.

"SOME OF THESE are slow learners," he noted "but some just haven't been given the incentive to stay in school. There ought to be more of them."

Witness Sees American in Bandit Caravan

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — New hope was held here today for the safety of Mrs. Anita Carroll, kidnapped by semicivilized bandits in the desert wilds east of here.

A U. S. embassy spokesman reports that police searching for the attractive American woman have found a witness, who saw a "blonde white-faced foreigner" traveling with a bandit gang near the Iran-Pakistan border.

Police and imperial troops are pressing their search for Mrs. Carroll of Issquah, Wash., in rough desert country in southeastern Iran. Outlaw tribesmen seized her Sunday night after killing her husband, another U.S. aid official, and two Iranians.

The embassy disclosed the police report in denying rumors that Mrs. Carroll had been abandoned by her captors. The report said the searchers were following a trail of paper and clothing, presumably left by Mrs. Carroll, when they found her empty suitcase and the witness.

THE EMBASSY spokesman said the witness "claimed to have seen a foreign lady on a mule, traveling along with the women and children of the bandits in the desert toward the southeast Iran-Pakistan border."

The witness said the woman he saw was not tied and was "not looking sick," adding: "The blonde white-faced foreigner did not have any difficulty and had no signs of injury."

The governor general of Mikan province in southeast Iran has offered a $10,000 reward to "every one giving any firm and positive report on Mrs. Carroll."

'The watch on the border dividing Iran and Pakistan already had been tightened when the widespread search began.

Iranian authorities wise in the ways of life of the semicivilized Tangorkeh desert tribesmen had said it was likely that she was being hidden by the gang until it could smuggle her to the coast and send her to Arabia or Pakistan. They said they believed she had not been killed by her kidnapers because she would bring a high price on the slave market in towns on the Persian Gulf and the Gulf of Oman.

Pakistan was asked earlier to help in the search.

THE EMBASSY statement came shortly after the Iranian government announced it would let Mrs. Carroll's kidnapers go unpunished if they will free her unharmed.

The amnesty offer was coupled with a U. S. embassy announcement that it was prepared to pay any amount of ransom for the release of the pretty 35-year-old woman.

Officials in Washington said that if there were any need for the United States to participate in paying ransom, the money could be made available from the International Cooperation Administration which runs the U. S. aid program in Iran.

Parts of Bomber Found near Lima

LIMA (AP) — Air Force authorities today are investigating reports of what appear to be parts of a B47 jet bomber's wheel well door found in separate spots in Allen County.

The highway patrol said a 12-year-old boy and a farmer Friday reported finding pieces of metal which Ronald Gaskill at the Lima Airport says look like pieces from the door that opens when wheels are projected for landing a B47 jet bomber. Ronald Barber, 12, and Paul Runser, a farmer, both of near Columbus Grove, reported finding the pieces.

Greenfielder Raps Postal Rate Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — L. Lowell Wilkin, president of the Wilkin Hosiery Co., Greenfield, Ohio, protested proposed increases in third class mail Friday before the House Postoffice Committee.

The rate applies to most advertising matter. Wilkin was one of six witnesses who protested the proposed increases.

Comptroller For Highway Agency Named

COLUMBUS — Paul L. Noble has been named comptroller of the Ohio Department of Highways by Highway Chief Charles Noble. The Nobles are not related.

The highway chief said Noble will begin work immediately and have general charge of financial planning. The 35-year-old appointee, a native of Cleveland, has an indefinite leave of absence from Ohio State University where he is an assistant professor of accounting.

Noble will have overall charge of the department's general budget and keep financial controls on Gov. C. William O'Neill's $1 billion road-building program.

The highway chief said the position was created to "increase our efficiency, get rid of surplus red tape, if it exists, and to make maximum use of resources available to the department."

Sniper's Bullets Smash into Trains

PHILADELPHIA — A sniper's bullets smashed through the windows of three trains of the Market Street elevated line Friday, terrorizing passengers and causing one man to faint after a slug narrowly missed his head.

A fourth train also was fired upon but the bullet glanced off the side of the car just under the window. Police said the sniper, who hasn't been found, probably was on a roof or in a window at a level with the elevated tracks.

It was announced during the meeting that Dr. Roderick Purcell, Columbus, director of special education in the Ohio Department of Education, will come here soon to conduct a clinic which will establish the mental ages of retarded children who are potential members of one or more special classes.

DR. PURCELL discussed the possibility of special classes at a meeting of parents and other interested citizens here last November. While only eight students are required for formation of a class, under state regulations, the new Council already has 12 applications, and other interested parents are urged to contact Mrs. Ramey.

Children living in the nearby communities in adjoining counties would be eligible to attend classes here, it was pointed out.

Efforts are being made to secure the services of a competent teacher and a room to house the students during class periods. The council itself will be expanded after the legal requirements for incorporation have been completed. It is the first organization of its kind ever formed here.

(2) Juvenile Court Judge Robert L. Brubaker Friday took under advisement the cases of four juveniles arrested Wednesday in the city. Disposition will be made later.

(3) Answering complaints that he have poured in since Sheriff Orland Hays slapped a 10:30 p. m. curfew on juveniles Thursday, Thompson announced that the curfew "wasn't meant to stop anyone from having an honest good time."

"Youngsters can stay at the movies or at places like that as long as they want. But when they go home, they should go home. Loitering will not be tolerated," Thompson said.

(4) Portsmouth law enforcement officers said that the three juveniles arrested here Monday, along with 18-year-old Roger Mossbarger of Good Hope have admitted, in all, seven jobs in the Portsmouth area. The youths originally admitted only four.

ALL THE BREAK-INS were during a one-night stand March 9, Portsmouth authorities said. The youths made the swing in a auto driven by Mossbarger, their alleged ringleader. They netted $40.

Burglars in New Holland Friday night apparently didn't get a thing for their troubles, Deputy Felkey said Saturday morning. They broke into Hill's Motor Sales, 25 Main St., and Kirk's Furniture Co., 9 W. Front St., rifled the office at each place, but apparently went away empty-handed, Deputy Felkey said.

Fingerprint tests at both places proved nothing, but officers were expecting a break anyway.

Deputy Thompson went to New Holland with the special permission of Sheriff Hays. The Pickaway County sheriff's office asked for his assistance because of his extensive investigations of juvenile break-ins.

EXPANDING his remarks on the curfew, Thompson said: "Any young person who has some worthwhile purpose on the street, or any one who can show that he's heading straight from one place to another won't have to worry. But youngsters just staying out with nothing to do will be hauled in."

"We won't just order them home," Thompson warned. "We'll bring them to the jail and tell their parents to come after them. We'll hold them there until they do so," he said.

Headmistress Dies
COLUMBUS — Mrs. Beatrice Constant Marvin, 55, headmistress of Columbus School for Girls, died here Friday.

Most of the increase since Judge Brubaker took office has been in "malicious mischief," he said. "Running away from home, petty thievery—things like that," he explained. Vandalism has been low, he said, sex offenses have been few, and traffic offenses haven't increased much at all.

"Playing hooky, fighting—things of that sort, they've all been growing, though," he added.

ODDLY ENOUGH, there have been no youths from here committed to the industrial school in the past two years, the Judge observed. But this, he explained, reflects the fact that more youngsters are getting into trouble—not the same ones more often.

What makes a juvenile delinquent, anyhow? What kind of a child is he?

"Well, we don't get too many from the so-called 'best' families," the Judge observed, wryly adding: "We get them—sure—but not very often."

"Usually, they're young people out of school. Often, they're out on a work permit, have held a job for about a week, and then have quit and started living off their parents," he explained.

"Idleness, boredom, improper training—they all show up in this group," he went on.

"SOME OF THESE are slow learners," he noted, "but some just haven't been given the incentive to stay in school. There ought

Witness Sees American in Bandit Caravan

TEHRAN, Iran — New hope was held here today for the safety of Mrs. Anita Carroll, kidnapped by semicivilized bandits in the desert wilds east of here.

A U. S. embassy spokesman reports that police searching for the attractive American woman have found a witness, who saw a "blonde white-faced foreigner" traveling with a bandit gang near the Iran-Pakistan border.

Police and imperial troops are pressing their search for Mrs. Carroll of Issaquah, Wash., in rough desert country in southeastern Iran. Outlaw tribesmen seized her Sunday night after killing her husband, another U.S. aid official, and two Iranians.

The embassy disclosed the police report in denying rumors that Mrs. Carroll had been abandoned by her captors. The report said the searchers were following a trail of paper and clothing, presumably left by Mrs. Carroll, when they found her empty suitcase and the witness.

THE EMBASSY spokesman said the witness "claimed to have seen a foreign lady on a mule, traveling along with the women and children of the bandits in the desert toward the southeast Iran-Pakistan border."

The witness said the woman he saw was not tied and was "not looking sick," adding:

"The blonde white-faced foreigner did not have any difficulty and had no signs of injury."

The governor general of Mlkan province in southeast Iran has offered a $10,000 reward to "every one giving any firm and positive report on Mrs. Carroll."

The watch on the border dividing Iran and Pakistan already had been tightened when the widespread search began.

Iranian authorities wise in the ways of life of the semicivilized Tangeorkeh desert tribesmen had said it was likely that she was being hidden by the gang until it could smuggle her to the coast and send her to Arabia or Pakistan. They said they believed she had not been killed by her kidnapers because she would bring a high price on the slave market in towns on the Persian Gulf and the Gulf of Oman.

Pakistan was asked earlier to help in the search.

THE EMBASSY statement came shortly after the Iranian government announced it would let Mrs. Carroll's kidnapers go unpunished if they will free her unharmed.

The amnesty offer was coupled with a U. S. embassy announcement that it was prepared to pay any amount of ransom for the release of the pretty 35-year-old woman.

Officials in Washington said that if there were any need for the United States to participate in paying ransom, the money could be made available from the International Cooperation Administration which runs the U. S. aid program in Iran.

Parts of Bomber Found near Lima
LIMA — Air Force authorities today are investigating reports of what appear to be parts of a B47 jet bomber's wheel well door found in separate spots in Allen County.

The highway patrol said a 12-year-old boy and a farmer Friday reported finding pieces of metal which Ronald Gaskill at the Lima Airport says look like pieces from the door that opens when wheels are projected for landing a B47 jet bomber. Ronald Barber, 12, and Paul Runser, a farmer, both of near Columbus Grove, reported finding the pieces.

'Soil Bank Base' Figure Explained

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the third in a series of four articles in which Wallace Barr, Ohio State University extension economist, explains some of the major provisions of the Soil Bank's conservation reserve program. The final article will follow.

By WALLACE BARR

After you sign a contract to participate in the conservation reserve program your county ASC committee will establish a "soil bank base" for your farm.

This base is an important figure to remember, since it determines what you can and can't do under the program and also what your rate of payments will be. Your farm soil bank base is the acreage eligible for conservation reserve at the full payment rate. This rate will average about $12 an acre a year in Ohio. The base includes all land growing what generally are considered soil depleting crops. Land in acreage reserve is a part of the farm soil bank base, but it is not eligible for conservation reserve payments.

The principal soil bank base crops in Ohio are corn, all small grains, soybeans, field peas and beans, tobacco, vegetables for fresh marketing or processing, potatoes, sugar beets and annual grasses where the seed is harvested.

Your farm soil bank base for 1957 will be determined by adding your total acreage of soil bank base crops in 1955 and 1956 to the number of acres you had in acreage reserve in 1956 and dividing by two.

IF WEATHER conditions prevented you from planting all your soil bank base crops in the years preceding your signing of a conservation reserve contract, some adjustments are possible. These adjustments can be made upward or downward for (1) abnormal weather, or (2) change in rotation. In both the established cropping pattern will be considered.

Madison Farmer's SCS Program Pays

LONDON — Back in 1951, J. A. Shumate's farm was feeding 8 cows, 8 young cattle, 8 brood sows, and 25 ewes. He wasn't satisfied with this output from his 112 acres so he asked the Madison County Soil Conservation District for help.

His first plan, which he developed with help from Paul Bangham, U. S. Soil Conservation Service, was built around a 4-year crop rotation of corn, small grain, and two years of alfalfa-grass meadow.

When Shumate's son, Howard, returned from the armed services, they went into farm partnership. Additional acreage was purchased and the farm is now 203 acres. In order to get a new rotation established, it was necessary to change most of the fences and the new rotation is corn, corn, small grain, meadow, corn, small grain, meadow, meadow. With this program, they have been able to increase the livestock program to 20 cows, 18 head of young cattle, 28 brood sows and 25 ewes.

ENOUGH FEED is now produced to carry this livestock because of the good conservation and fertility practices followed. Ever since the plan was agreed upon, lime and fertilizer have been applied in accord with soil test findings.

Corn in all fields, planted to corn in 1956, yielded over 100 bushels to the acre. One on which he had applied his top fertility program checked out at 151 bushels to the acre. Which, according to the Shumates, has yielded 35 bushels per acre, while hay and rotation pastures have produced bumper returns.

Two new pole barns and a new corn crib have been built recently. The farm home has been remodeled. "By following our farm plan, we certainly have increased our yields," the Shumates declared recently to Bangham.

ed by your county ASC committee.

The acres of soil bank base crops you can harvest in any year is the farm soil bank base minus the acreage you placed in conservation reserve at the regular payment rate. These are your "permitted acres." Land you place in acreage reserve in any year of your conservation reserve contract is not charged against the permitted acreage.

For example, if you have a farm soil bank base of 89 acres and you place 10 acres in conservation reserve, your permitted acreage is 79 acres. If your farm soil bank base is 100 acres and you designate 15 acres for the conservation reserve and 10 acres for acreage, your permitted acreage is 85 acres providing there are at least 10 acres of additional eligible land.

You can place rotated meadow land not included in your farm soil bank base in conservation reserve, by you won't receive the full payment for it. Instead, you'll receive payment at a "non-diversion rate," which is 30 per cent of your full county rental rate.

Land Owners Eye Drainage Law Changes

"Be alert to the effects of proposed changes in Ohio's drainage laws and make your interests known to members of the General Assembly," is the advice of Sam G. Huber, extension agricultural engineer at Ohio State University.

"Owner" has been redefined in the legislation now under consideration, Huber says. A broader meaning to that word would affect offices of state institutions, departments, public corporations and political subdivisions.

"Land" is defined to include railroads, roads, telephone, telegraph and transmission lines, in addition to the area within a given watershed.

"Benefits" spelled out in the bill would involve land from which the run-off into water-courses is speeded by man-made improvements.

COUNTY commissioners would be given authority to set up ditch maintenance funds and may have the right to levy assessments for those funds. The commissioners would buy maintenance equipment and the county engineer would have control of that equipment.

The county engineer would have the right to file complaint with the county prosecutor who "shall bring suits against persons or others who in the opinion of the county engineer are violating the water pollution laws."

All of the proposed changes in Ohio's drainage laws have broad implications for landowners, Huber said. He emphasized the tie-in with growing concern about adequate water supplies for agriculture, industry and cities in the future.

"Storage of water to regulate stream flow" is one of the purposes spelled out in the bill, he explained.

Soil Bank Signups Far Behind Goal

WASHINGTON (AP)—Final figures are expected to show that farmers plan to retire 21 million acres of land this year from production of wheat, corn, rice and tobacco under the soil bank program.

A report issued by the Agriculture Department Thursday showed that 20½ million acres have been pledged for retirement. The sign-up campaign will probably wind up next week. The maximum goal was 25 million acres.

Government payments farmers would earn totaled $570,717,000, far short of the $750 million maximum authorized by law.

"The real wealth of our nation—food, minerals, and fiber—comes from the soil, and conservation practices are prolonging the soil's usefulness for decades, even centuries," — John F. Cunningham, Dean of Agriculture, The Ohio State University.

Farm Size Seen as Key To Profits

A panel of Ohio State University agricultural economists suggested some ways a farm operator can increase his farm size without buying or renting more acres.

Key to their suggestions was a greater volume of production on a given farm. The most profitable farm of any size, according to J. Robert Tompkin, assistant professor in the department of agricultural economics, is the one that uses land, labor, capital and management in the best combination.

Tompkin offers some tips on how farmers might get closer to the most profitable use of their resources per acre. One way, he says, is to calculate the most profitable use that can be made of resources left over.

Improved and adapted varieties of seed, labor saving tillage practices, weed and insect controls, proper use of fertilizers, and many other innovations can help you increase net income," Tompkin says.

E. T. SHAUDYS, also assistant professor in the department of agricultural economics, lists two reasons why farm size needs to be increased—to spread overhead costs over more units of output and to offer greater opportunities for specialization.

The key to economic efficiency," Shaudys says, is to produce where the last dollar spent for machinery, fertilizer, building tile, livestock, etc., just returns a dollar of income. Larger farmers usually can more fully utilize their equipment and labor and spread part of their costs over more pounds of pork, beef and milk, or over more bushels of grain.

Usually, as the size of a farm or a farm enterprise increases, there is a tendency to specialize. We must and can afford," the economist says, to spend more time, effort and management on a particular job. Usually this permits the development of greater skill and improved production efficiency."

Research Seeks More Satisfactory Meat Products

Science is working overtime these days to bring more satisfactory meat products to the American dinner table.

In a report to Farm and Home Week visitors on the Ohio State University campus V. R. Cahill of the university's department of animal science, said meat research results should point the way to increased efficiency in the livestock and meat industry, production of more desirable meat animals, improved methods of meat processing and a more satisfactory product for the table.

Research investigations now being conducted by the meat industry, Cahill said, aim toward such goals as: the production of 200-pound hogs in five months, a 10 per cent increase in the edible portion of beef carcasses, tenderization of beef with enzymes, changes in the water-holding capacity of meat, curing and smoking pork in 24 hours, preservation of meat with antibiotics, culturing bacteria for fermented sausage products and radiation as a means of meat preservation.

Poultry Industry 'Big Business' In Ohio

More than 45 million dollars worth of poultry and poultry products were handled by federal-state resident graders, inspectors and sanitarians in Ohio during 1956, according to the Bureau of Markets, Ohio Department of Agriculture.

There are 44 federal-state employees doing this grading and inspection work in Ohio. They are paid by the processors and poultry companies who have asked for this service.

Some nine poultry plants in Ohio have a sanitary program at the present time. They are: Poultry Producers Assn., Versailles; Kissell Brothers, Inc., Columbus Grove; Sam Brame and Son, Cleveland; J. E. Parker Co., Eaton; McKinley Produce Co., Piqua; Joe O. Frank Co., Dayton; Far Best Turkey Co., Frankfort, and Wilson Brothers, Cincinnati.

Dressed poultry grading is being done at Koppenhofer Brothers, Deshler; Cortland Produce, Toledo; Far Best Turkey Co., and Wilson Brothers.

THE MAIN duties of the graders, inspectors and sanitarians include continuous checking to see that graded eggs conform to U. S.

Standards. The Ohio Department standard.

The federal-state graders are charged with the use of government grade stamps, labels on the one dozen cartons and the issuing of certificates of quality on all the products they grade.

During the past year 2,554,057 - 30 dozen cases of eggs were graded. This would amount to 4,236 carloads.

Some 29.3 per cent of all shell eggs graded were packed in one dozen cartons. A total of 16,452,090 dozen were packed in this manner.

Each of these cartons were sealed with the federal state label showing the grade and date of the inspection. This is another service for the consumers protection in buying quality poultry and poultry products.

Roadside Markets Hike Incomes

Roadside marketing can be an excellent way for Ohio farmers to increase their incomes.

B. L. Bere, extension economist in fruits and vegetables, and T. W. Leed, extension specialist in food merchandising at Ohio State University say careful planning of a roadside market is the first step to a successful operation.

Producers should consider such factors as location, labor requirements, type and size of buildings and facilities, initial and operating costs, what products can be sold, expected volume and whether or not the operation fits the overall farm program.

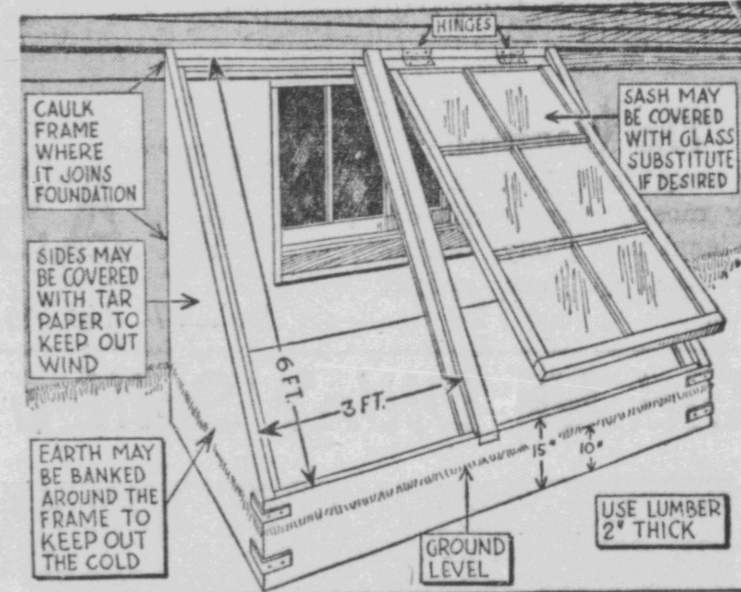

ONCE A FARMER decides to sell products through a roadside market, the specialist pointed out, there are many things which can help him increase sales—adequate parking facilities, an attractive and well-landscaped market, displays which are neat, fresh and of dependable quality; variety in size and type of package, fair prices, advertising and courtesy toward customers.

Operators of roadside markets are, in effect, operating a retail store, Bere and Leed explained. Many of the same principles that successful supermarkets use can be applied to roadside markets.

For a final test, the specialists said, roadside market operators can ask themselves these questions concerning their operations: "Would I Stop Here?" and "Would I Come Back?"

Any nation is rich so long as its supply of soil resources is greater than the needs of its people.

Hotbeds such as this give amateur gardeners jump on the weather in planting seeds. Basement heat keeps plants at even temperature at minimum expense.

Basement Heat Can Give Seeds Pre-Season Start

The extra heat in your basement can give you a head start of several weeks on a flower or vegetable garden.

Gardeners, knowing that heated basements themselves are bad places to start seeds growing, frequently overlook the possibilities of funneling warm basement air into an outside hotbed.

Long before it is safe to sow them outdoors, seeds will flourish in a hot-bed. The ideal location for it is against a basement window with a southern exposure.

Dig a foot - deep excavation of the size desired for the hot-bed. Build a frame which will overlap the basement window by about three inches when placed tightly against it. The sides must slant sharply from above the window to within a few inches of the ground.

THE TOP can be a standard type hot - bed sash, or even an old window or glass door. Be sure that the frame fits tightly around the top, which should be attached by hinges. This permits you to raise the top when circulation is needed.

Bank earth around the frame to keep out the cold and make the entire structure as tight as possible to ward off winds. To do this, it may be necessary to caulk the frame where it joins the foundation of the house.

This gives you a functional bed for pre - season planting which can be heated simply by opening the basement window around which the frame has been built.

The window is left open on sunless days and at night. When the seeds are getting enough heat from the sun beaming through the glass top, the basement window can be closed.

WHILE the average temperature in basement window hot-beds is lower than in other types, what heat there is distributes evenly and ventilation is excellent. However, care should be taken to prevent drafts and there should be good ventilation on warm days.

Ventilation should be cut to short periods in cool weather.

The hot - box cover does not have to be made of glass. Such substitutes as polyethylene sheets of double thickness are lighter and not so likely to be broken.

The polyethylene is good for at least a season and other translucent materials, strengthened with wire, will last longer. All admit an adequate supply of light.

"The plain truth is that Americans, as a people, have never learned to love the land and to regard it as an enduring resource. They have seen it only as a field for exploitation and a source of immediate financial return."—Dr. Hugh H. Bennett.

Survey Is Now Planned Here For Non-Fatal Farm Accidents

Farm organizations here will map plans for a survey of farm accidents in Fayette County at a meeting at 8 p. m. April 5, in the Farm Bureau auditorium County Agricultural Agent W. W. Montgomery, announced today.

Object of the survey will be two-fold: (1) To learn the frequency, severity, types, causes, time and places of non - fatal accidents among farm people and (2) To stimulate interest in developing a long - range program of safety education on a state-wide basis.

Fayette County is one of the eight Ohio counties which will participate in the study. Others are Putnam, Hancock, Lake, Medina, Carroll, Clinton and Perry counties.

"WE HAVE reliable information concerning fatal accidents to farm people," the county agent said, "but former surveys have not given us accurate information on non-fatal ones. This study will point out some of our problems and serve as a basis for a pinpointed program."

Two Ohio State University specialists, R. H. Baker, agricultural economist, and W. E. Stuckey, extension safety specialist, will be at the meeting to discuss plans for the program on a state-wide basis and help county leaders set up the machinery for conducting the survey.

On the county level the Extension Service staff, Farm Bureau, Extension Service Advisory Council and Grange, will sponsor the project. Ohio State University's Extension safety specialist, its Departments of Agricultural Economics and Agricultural Engineering, and the Ohio Farm and Home Safety

CREEP FEEDING PROGRAM BUILT BY EXPERIENCE

Purina fed 2,800 cattle to develop Creep Feeding Plans

When you feed your calves on one of Purina's Creep Feeding Plans you are getting the advantage of years of field research. These tests proved that it pays to creep feed calves the Purina way.

Tests were run on calves of various qualities and breeds and in all parts of the country. They averaged only 153 days in length.

Tests proved creep feeding paid off these 3 ways:

- More beef to sell—creep fed calves averaged 39½ pounds heavier.
- Upgrading—34% more Choice and Good calves.
- Extra cow condition—Cows with creep fed calves averaged 44½ lbs. heavier.

Yes, it pays to creep feed calves. And it pays to follow a plan that has been thoroughly tested and proved—like Purina's. Next time you're in the store let us figure out a Purina Creep Feeding Plan to fit your particular need. Make it soon!

U. S. To Plant Record Number of Trees This Year

By LEONARD J. SNYDER
(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON — More trees will be planted this year than ever before in the nation's history.

A principal reason is the federal government's Soil Bank Conservation Reserve Program, a long-range project designed to adjust the production of agricultural commodities and increase the nation's soil, water and forest resources.

The Eisenhower administration, pledged to raise living standards of the American farmer, is seeking through the Soil Bank to cut back production of our farms. It is doing this in what is known as the acreage reserve and the lesser-known conservation reserve program.

The government expects that 250 million trees will have been made available by state tree nurseries and privately-owned nurseries for planting in the Soil Bank's conservation reserve by June 30.

Within three or four years, nurseries will be producing one billion trees a year for the conservation reserve program. Farmers who wish to take part in the tree-planting project may sign contracts with Uncle Sam. By living up to their 10-year contracts—agreeing to plant trees instead of crops—they'll be entitled to annual payments totaling $450 million a year.

THE GOVERNMENT estimates that there'll be a staggering five billion more trees in the country as a result of the Soil Bank program alone. This is more than double the 2,356,000,000 trees planted by the old Civilian Conservation Corps between 1933 and 1942.

Behind all this increased fervor

In youth it shelters him—as the poet wrote. However, there'll be more trees in his future!

for good forestry lies the basic wood products.

According to the American Forest Products Industries, Inc., an educational organization in Washington representing U. S. forest industries, pulp and paper mills, Americans use 5,129 articles made from wood. The list, it adds, is growing continually.

The American Tree Farm system, incidentally, is an industry-sponsored program through which good forest management by "small" woodlot owners and others is recognized publicly.

WHEN A LANDOWNER feels he is managing his woodlot wisely, he may apply to his state tree farm committee, which will arrange to have the woodlot inspected.

If the inspection by a recognized forester shows management measures up to the American Tree Farm system, the landowner gets a certificate as well as a Tree Farm sign, which he may display. In this way, the tree farmer is contributing to the tree farm movement by encouraging other landowners to grow trees as a crop.

The American Tree Farm system is administered by the American Forest Products Industries, 1816 N. Street, N. W., here. Landowners interested in the system may write to the organization for further information. No membership fees or dues are required. The idea behind the movement is simply to make more wood available to manufacturers of timber products.

THE NEED for a continuous supply of wood is apparent when you consider that the average American uses about 80 cubic feet of wood a year. Lumber is used in greater amounts than any other industrial timber product.

Each one of us uses twice as much lumber as a Russian, four times as much as an Englishman, and six times as much as a Frenchman. Our use of paper, too, far exceeds that of any country.

If there ever was a bargain in this country, your newspaper, which you buy for but a few cents, is surely it. In many cities across the land the price you paid for a newspaper is far less than what the blank paper alone costs.

Wood plays and will continue to play an important part in the life of every American. With an increasing population it is obvious that more timber products (except fuelwood) will be used 10 years from now.

IF THE PRICE of industrial wood rises faster than the price of competing materials, probably less wood per person will be used. Even so, with the expected increase in population and improved standard of living the total demand for wood in 1975 is likely to be 25 per cent greater than it is today. In the year 2000 it is expected to be 67 per cent greater.

On the other hand, if industrial wood maintains its present relative place in the economy, and the price rises no faster than the price of competing materials, the total demand for wood in 1975 is likely to be 40 per cent greater than it is today and twice as great in 2000 A. D.

The government estimates that about one out of every 10 American families owns a small forest, considered to be less than 100 acres.

It is from these different folk—farmers, businessmen, professional people, housewives, retired pensioners and others not associated with the forest industry—that the timber needs of tomorrow will come.

Workmen's Compensation To Be Studied

Members of the legislative committee of the Fayette County Farm Bureau will learn more about the relationship of the farmer and the state Bureau of Workmen's Compensation next Thursday evening at a meeting in the Farm Bureau auditorium, S. Fayette St., here.

Richard A. Knost, statistician with the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation for 26 years, will be the guest speaker. Special emphasis will be placed on workmen's compensation rates as they affect the farmer in discussions at the meeting.

The meeting here was arranged by C. William Swank of the Research Department of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

The legislative committee of the Farm Bureau is made up of one representative from each of the 13 Farm Bureau Councils in the county and three members of the board of directors. Directors on the committee are Frank Solars, Barton Montgomery and John Morgan. Committee chairman is Kenneth Bush.

FRANK ALEXANDER, public relations man of the county Farm Bureau, explained that at the annual meeting last year, a resolution, recommending a study of the workmen's compensation system, was approved. The recommendation, he said, was passed along to the legislative committee.

Alexander pointed out that members of the committee would take back to the Councils they represent a digest of the discussions with Knost for further discussion by the Council members.

Knost is in the actuarial section of the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation. He served in the South Pacific with the Navy during World War II, is married and has one daughter and lives in Worthington.

Round about Fayette County

By B. E. KELLEY
Never before have I seen so many red wing blackbirds this early in the season.

They are in the county by the tens of thousands, and will nest here as they usually do.

Red wings usually show up sometime in April and remain until fall, but they are really back in force this time.

I have noticed that these beautiful blackbirds have been increasing in the county over a period of years, until there are now several times as many as in previous years.

The red wing patch the sturdy black fellows carry as a distinctive mark makes them one of the outstanding birds as far as contrasting beauty is concerned.

I have always admired the red wings, enjoyed hearing their peculiar, almost startling cries, and watched them in flight, nest building and rearing their young, from the ungainly featherless, greasy-looking "chicks" to the full-fledged adults.

OLD INDIAN TRAILS

There were no less than five distinct Indian trails across Fayette County from north to south in the early days, and these trails or paths, were very pronounced, being well into the ground from a few inches to two feet or more, according to reports handed down by pioneer woodsmen of the county.

One of these trails, according to the information came up Lees Creek in Green Township and crossed to the west bank of Rattlesnake Creek and northward.

Another followed the east bank of Rattlesnake Creek, and a third paralleled Paint Creek across the county. The fourth came up the east side of Paint Creek and followed the East Fork of Paint northward, while the fifth trail was the North Fork of Paint with a branch extending up Compton Creek.

It will be seen by these well de-finer Indian trails, which were sometimes simply trails through the forest originally made by buffaloes, followed closely the streams from which the Indians took large numbers of fish. They caught them on hooks, speared them and herded them into shallow water where they caught them by hand.

The east and west Indian trails probably also were well defined but because of the numerous streams to be crossed, east and west travel was not as heavy as the north and south travel.

However the county was laced with Indian trails through the woods and prairie lands, and the Red Men usually went in numbers of two or more for protection from wild animals and other tribes some of which were not friendly.

It was not uncommon for Indians to move from place to place, and they lived in villages, with teepees made of animal skins, or log shacks with bark roofs. They invariably located their villages on ground above flood level.

The Indians early realized that "in numbers there is safety" and they lived accordingly.

BABY PRAYING MANTIS

When Mrs. H. C. Stegall, 41 Railroad St., Jeffersonville, started to clean a window Friday morning, she discovered the window was teeming with tiny insects, which she identified as praying mantis which had hatched from an egg-nest placed in the house last fall.

She not only found the little insects in the window, but other places in the room. There were scores of them, and Mrs. Stegall plans to place some of the youngsters in her flower room in an effort to save them, as they live largely on other insects.

A few years ago discovery was made one winter morning that the news room of the Record Herald contained scores of the little praying mantis, and search developed that the mother praying mantis apparently had crawled into the office in early fall and deposited her putty-like egg nest on an unused electrical heater in one corner of the room. The warmth had caused the mantis to hatch two or three months ahead of schedule.

MARTINS NOT BACK

The purple martins which, with one or two exceptions, have, for many years, returned to their nests on the Ralph Taylor premises on Yeoman St., March 28, failed to arrive on the usual date.

Belief is expressed that by reason of some unseasonable weather in the south the martins were delayed in their migratory flight north, and are expected to appear here at any time.

First martins in the community arrived Monday and were reported by Harry and Charles Hiser at Milledgeville.

The snow and rain here Thursday was not a very good welcome mat for the martins, and apparently they await more favorable weather before taking up their abode here.

Management, Rations Regulate Cattle Profits over Years

Careful buying and selling of cattle is an important item for profit during a year, but over a period of years profit or loss is regulated by management and the rations fed.

Cattlemen making profits are those who, in addition to watching markets, produce feed crops returning the most beef per acre of cropland, according to E. W. Klosterman of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station animal science department.

The problem of the farmer is to best use his crops to get the greatest return. Corn is the top producer of nutrients per acre, says Klosterman. Most farms must raise meadow crops in addition to corn.

EXPERIMENTS were conducted at the Ohio station comparing amount of gain, degree of finish, and grade of cattle at market weight using various rations. Rations used in the study were corn silage fed with a protein supplement, ground ear corn minus the stalks and leaves, and a combination of half ground ear corn and corn silage.

Results of the study showed corn silage fed with protein supplement was the top producer of beef per acre. When marketed, these cattle graded somewhat lower than those on the other two rations, states Klosterman. A combination of ground ear corn and silage was the next highest producer.

Weight, length of feeding period, age and grade of feeders should be considered in deciding what proportion of corn silage to feed. Older, heavier cattle will fatten to a higher grade on corn silage than younger cattle. Lower grades of feeder cattle may make more profitable use of a heavy feed of corn silage than top quality feeders.

A longer feeding period to market weight is necessary when feeding cattle of similar age, weight, and quality, says Klosterman.

"We can use a lot of the capital and the labor we have in every community to put complete soil and water-use programs in effect on individual farms. Soil conservation and the kind of farming that goes with it are not only right morally, they pay big dividends in dollars and cents,"—Chester C. Davis.

Econogram for Farmers

EDITOR'S NOTE: These news highlights in economics and public affairs relating to agriculture are summarized by agricultural extension economists at Ohio State University.

Farm residents received, in addition to $11.6 billion from farming, $1.7 billion in wage payments to farm workers and $6.5 billion from non-farm sources. The total income of farm people was $19.8 billion 1 per cent more than in 1955.

Fluid milk prices declined seasonally at both producer and consumer levels in early March. Dealers' buying prices for Class 1 milk averaged $5.41 per cwt., 21 cents above a year ago and 11 cents below February.

Sows farrowing in spring of 1957 (December-May) for Corn Belt States estimated at 5,375,000 head, about the same as last year's 5,362,000 head. March survey indicated an increase of 1 per cent over December report. Ohio and Kansas report smaller sow numbers for 1957 spring farrow than a year earlier.

Sows farrowing in the U. S. in first three months of fall season (June thru August) expected to be 5 per cent above same period a year ago. Indicates that cycle is in process of turning toward increased numbers. Will begin to be reflected in increased slaughter late in 1957 and early in 1958. Look for some weakening in price to begin at that time compared with past three months.

Commercial hatchery production in February was 11 per cent below February a year ago but 2 per cent above average. Demand for broiler type chicks is slightly stronger than a year ago but for egg type chicks is considerably weaker.

U. S. farmers indicate intentions to plant 12 million fewer acres in 59 crops than in 1956, a reduction of about 3.5 per cent. Intended acreage shows the following reductions in crops: corn, 5 per cent; spring wheat, 21 per cent; oats, 2.5 per cent; winter wheat, 17 per cent; rye, 3 per cent; tobacco, 17 per cent; rice 10 per cent. Increases indicated for soybeans, 3.5 per cent; barley, 9 per cent, sugar beets, 10 per cent; grain sorghums, 23 per cent.

Ohio farmers intend to plant in 1957 2 per cent fewer acres in crops than in 1956. Intentions are for a reduction in acreage of 4 per cent in corn; 1 per cent in barley to tobacco; 5 per cent for cigar filler; 4 per cent of hay; 10 per cent in wheat and 5 per cent in rye. There will likely be an increase of 2 per cent in oats; 6 per cent for soybeans; 1 per cent in potatoes; and 14 per cent in sugar beets. Same acreage in barley is indicated.

Indicated corn acreage cut of 5 per cent this year would make a production of 2.9 billion bushels (using an average yield of 40 bushels per acre). This compares with 3.45 billion bushels produced last year and would be less than last year would be consumed by livestock next year. Would begin to cut in to "surplus" stocks (which now amount to about 1.3 of a year's supply).

Wheat is not included in the resale of 1955 and 1956 crops now under price support loans. Extended resale on the 1955 corn crop permitted provided it is shelled before resale. The 1956 corn crop now under loan or purchase agreement can be resold. Both the extended resale and resale corn programs apply to non-moth counties.

"When an acre of our previous American grows its richness or is washed back into the sea, our lives are affected—no matter where we may live in the United States."—Mrs. Walter Ferguson, in her syndicated column, "As One Woman Looks at Life".

"We cannot afford to curtail soil conservation, either in the East or the West. It is vital to the future of our farm areas, and though you may live in a city, what happens to the land of your country touches you as closely as if you were a farmer."—Eleanor Roose-

Limestone Is Pillar In Fertility Program

Successful modern farming requires constantly increasing efficiency, according to E. O. McLean, agronomist in the College of Agriculture at Ohio State University.

Speaking before a Farm and Home Week audience, McLean described use of agricultural limestone as "one of those practices which serves as a pillar in a strong fertility program underlying a good farm management operation."

Pointing out that the need for lime in Ohio is eight times greater than the present rate of application, McLean summarized his presentation by explaining that lime actually functions as both a fertilizer and a neutralizer.

As a fertilizer, he said, lime adds calcium and possibly some dolomitic magnesium to the soil. It increases the base saturation of the soil making it easier for plants to obtain nutrients. It may be added to build up the limited supply of bases in the soil or to bring the nutrient situation into better balance. However, McLean cautioned, lime acts more slowly than most commercial fertilizers and thus requires planning ahead.

LIME AFFECTS crops in at least four ways, according to McLean.

It increases yields, permits successful growth of crops not otherwise grown, affects chemical composition of crops grown, and affects the quality of crops grown.

As a neutralizer, lime cuts acidity; blocks iron and aluminum which otherwise would react with and tie up in unavailable forms the soluble phosphates applied; lowers the solubility of manganese which might otherwise be toxic to plants; stimulates microbes in the soil to decompose organic matter and stimulates nitrogen fixing bacteria.

U. S. To Plant Record Number of Trees This Year

By LEONARD J. SNYDER

WASHINGTON — More trees will be planted this year than ever before in the nation's history.

A principal reason is the federal government's Soil Bank Conservation Reserve Program, a long-range project designed to adjust the production of agricultural commodities and increase the nation's soil, water and forest resources.

The Eisenhower administration, pledged to raise living standards of the American farmer, is seeking through the Soil Bank to cut back production of our farms. It is doing this in what is known as the acreage reserve and the lesser-known conservation reserve program.

The government expects that 250 million trees will have been made available by state tree nurseries and privately-owned nurseries for planting in the Soil Bank's conservation reserve by June 30.

Within three or four years, nurseries will be producing one billion trees a year for the conservation reserve program. Farmers who wish to take part in the tree-planting project may sign contracts with Uncle Sam. By living up to their 10-year contracts—agreeing to plant trees instead of crops—they'll be entitled to annual payments totaling $450 million a year.

THE GOVERNMENT estimates that there'll be a staggering five billion more trees in the country as a result of the Soil Bank program alone. This is more than double the 2,350,000,000 trees planted by the old Civilian Conservation Corps between 1933 and 1942.

Aside from the tree-planting phase of the Soil Bank, landowners everywhere are waking up to the fact that money really grows on trees. Interest in tree farming—the growing of timber as a crop—is best attested by the fact that nearly every state in the union now is taking part in the voluntary, industry-operated American Tree Farming system of growing timber as a crop on taxpaying timberlands.

Behind all this increased fervor

In youth it shelters him—as the poet wrote. However, there'll be more trees in his future!

for good forestry lies the basic wood products.

According to the American Forest Products Industries, Inc., an educational organization in Washington representing U. S. forest industries, pulp and paper mills, Americans use 5,129 articles made from wood. The list, it adds, is growing continually.

The American Tree Farm system, incidentally, is an industry-sponsored program through which good forest management by "small" woodlot owners and others is recognized publicly.

WHEN A LANDOWNER feels he is managing his woodlot wisely, he may apply to his state tree farm committee, which will arrange to have the woodlot inspected.

If the inspection by a recognized forester shows management measures up to the American Tree Farm system, the landowner gets a certificate as well as a Tree Farm sign, which he may display. In this way, the tree farmer is contributing to the tree farm movement by encouraging other landowners to grow trees as a crop.

The American Tree Farm system is administered by the American Forest Products Industries, 1816 N. Street, N. W., here. Landowners interested in the system may write to the organization for further information. No membership fees or dues are required. The idea behind the movement is simply to make more wood available to manufacturers of timber products.

THE NEED for a continuous supply of wood is apparent when you consider that the average American uses about 80 cubic feet of wood a year. Lumber is used in greater amounts than any other industrial timber product.

Each one of us uses twice as much lumber as a Russian, four times as much as an Englishman, and six times as much as a Frenchman. Our use of paper, too, far exceeds that of any country.

If there ever was a bargain in this country, your newspaper, which you buy for but a few cents, is surely it. In many cities across the land the price you paid for a newspaper is far less than what the blank paper alone costs.

Wood plays and will continue to play an important part in the life of every American. With an increasing population it is obvious that more timber products (except fuelwood) will be used 10 years from now.

IF THE PRICE of industrial wood rises faster than the price of competing materials, probably less wood per person will be used. Even so, with the expected increase in population and improved standard of living the total demand for wood in 1975 is likely to be 25 per cent greater than it is today. In the year 2000 it is expected to be 67 per cent greater.

On the other hand, if industrial wood maintains its present relative place in the economy, and the price rises no faster than the price of competing materials, the total demand for wood in 1975 is likely to be 40 per cent greater than it is today and twice as great in 2000 A. D.

The government estimates that about one out of every 10 American families owns a small forest, considered to be less than 100 acres.

It is from these different folk—farmers, businessmen, professional people, housewives, retired pensioners and others not associated with the forest industry—that the timber needs of tomorrow will come.

Workmen's Compensation To Be Studied

Members of the legislative committee of the Fayette County Farm Bureau will learn more about the relationship of the farmer and the state Bureau of Workmen's Compensation next Thursday evening at a meeting in the Farm Bureau auditorium, S. Fayette St., here.

Richard A. Knost, stacciano with the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation for 26 years, will be the guest speaker. Special emphasis will be placed on workmen's compensation rates as they affect the farmer in discussions at the meeting.

The meeting here was arranged by C. William Swank of the Research Department of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

The legislative committee of the Farm Bureau is made up of one representative from each of the 13 Farm Bureau Councils in the county and three members of the board of directors. Directors on the committee are Frank Solars, Barton Montgomery and John Morgan. Committee chairman is Kenneth Bush.

FRANK ALEXANDER, public relations man of the county Farm Bureau, explained that at the annual meeting last year, a resolution, recommending a study of the workmen's compensation system, was approved. The recommendation, he said, was passed along to the legislative committee.

Alexander pointed out that members of the committee would take back to the Councils they represent a digest of the discussions with Knost for further discussion by the Council members.

Knost is in the actuarial section of the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation. He served in the South Pacific with the Navy during World War II, is married and has one daughter and lives in Worthington.

Round about Fayette County

By B. E. KELLEY

Never before have I seen so many red wing blackbirds this early in the season.

They are in the county by the tens of thousands, and will nest here as they usually do.

Red wings usually show up sometime in April and remain until fall, but they are really back in force this time.

I have noticed that these beautiful blackbirds have been increasing in the county over a period of years, until there are now several times as many as in previous years.

The red wing patch the sturdy black fellows carry as a distinctive mark makes them one of the outstanding birds as far as contrasting beauty is concerned.

I have always admired the red wings, enjoyed hearing their peculiar, almost startling cries, and watched them in flight, nest building and rearing their young, from the ungainly featherless, greasy-looking "chicks" to the full-fledged adults.

OLD INDIAN TRAILS

There were no less than five distinct Indian trails across Fayette County from north to south in the early days, and these trails or paths, were very pronounced, being well into the ground from a few inches to two feet or more, according to reports handed down by pioneer woodsmen of the county.

One of these trails, according to the information, came up Lees Creek in Green Township and crossed to the west bank of Rattlesnake Creek and northward.

Another followed the east bank of Rattlesnake Creek, and a third paralleled Paint Creek across the county. The fourth came up the east side of Paint Creek and followed the East Fork of Paint northward, while the fifth trail was up the North Fork of Paint with a branch extending up Compton Creek.

It will be seen by these well de-

finer Indian trails, which were sometimes simply trails through the forest originally made by buffaloes, followed closely the streams from which the Indians took large numbers of fish. They caught them on hooks, speared them and herded them into shallow water where they caught them by hand.

The east and west Indian trails probably also were well defined but because of the numerous streams to be crossed, east and west travel was not as heavy as the north and south travel.

However the county was laced with Indian trails through the woods and prairie lands, and the Red Men usually went in numbers of two or more for protection from wild animals and other tribes some of which were not friendly.

It was not uncommon for Indians to move from place to place, and they lived in villages, with tepees made of animal skins, or log shacks with bark roofs. They invariably located their villages on ground above flood level.

"The Indians early realized that 'in numbers there is safety' and they lived accordingly."

The Highway Litterbugs Need Attention

With the arrival of spring, the litterbugs are starting to make a noticeable reappearance on Fayette County highways and even on Washington C. H. streets.

Whether they know it or not these individuals are violating a law which subjects them to a sizable fine.

Repeated warnings in the past have been made by Sheriff Hays and city officials but the number of careless motorists and others who throw papers, bottles and other debris on roads and streets seems to increase rather than become less.

With spring beginning to put on its fresh raiment as do most women, children and men, so should cities and villages and rural districts.

Municipal street cleaners are seldom able to keep up with the untidy habits of some citizens. In many cases such habits are not deliberate but reflect extreme carelessness and a lack of civic pride. The result is dirty streets, gutters and cluttered sidewalks, the mark of the litterbug's thoughtless habits.

The clean countryside in rural districts is unhappily made to look bad, also, by the habits of those who have no regard for appearance by disposing of their rubbish along highways and country roads.

This brings up another related problem

to which President Eisenhower referred recently in the suggestion that it would be a good idea for Congress to bring economic pressure on individual states to insure that proposed federal restrictions on highway business and advertising are enforced. He suggests that federal lawmakers authorize the treasury to withhold a portion of the federal funds allocated for road construction from those states which do not comply with government standards on the placing of billboards and roadside commercial establishments.

Maybe it would be better if states assumed the initiative in the matter. State government should always take the lead in serving the American people, whenever it is practicable to do so.

The Ohio General Assembly, for instance, should see to it that clear-cut regulations pertaining to billboards are set forth now. The State Highway Department could at least be authorized to follow general rules laid down by Congress, and to make allowances for such rules in blueprinting future construction. The Legislature ought to make it clear that in Ohio dangerously distracting and unseemly roadside advertising must be kept at a minimum.

The Fashions Change

By George Sokolsky

When we were all young, it was fashionable to have appendicitis and many died of it.

Then they changed its name to an appendectomy and blamed it all on castor oil. Now not so many die of it.

Instead now one has various forms of heart ailments, not the romantic kind that comes from unrequited love but the physical kind that comes from eating the wrong kind of foods.

Back when I was young, politicians smoked cigars, generally the two for a quarter kind, as that marked a man off as having moved a step up the ladder of life, the nickel cigar being for the common people.

Nowadays, even the most advanced gentlemen in public life smoke cigarettes, unfiltered or filtered, the ordinary size or king size, but according to the doctors cigarettes could give you cancer. It used to be that cigarettes stunted the growth. A youth who smoked "cotton nails," as they were called, was not supposed to grow to be tall and to have hair on his chest.

Women did not smoke — certainly not in public. Of course, there were always the wrong kinds of women who should have been ashamed of themselves. They also put rouge on their cheeks which was the trade mark of an unmentionable profession that every boy learned about from other boys and contact with which was a sure cure for pimples and blackheads.

If a girl became one of those, she was not called a celebrity but was sure to meet a fate worse than death.

It was a very good era that worshipped robustness. A woman who had less on her frame than Jayne Mansfield was regarded as unsafe to marry lest she be susceptible to tuberculosis which was called consumption. When the doctors fancied up the names of these sicknesses, they charged more to cure them. Consumption was something to be feared, as many got it and it was one of the great revolutions in medicine when it was discovered that fresh air, eggs and milk were the best cure.

Nobody had yet discovered orange juice. In fact, oranges were a fruit that showed up around Christmas time. They were small; their skin was pitted; and one ate them gingerly lest their juice squirt into the eye.

There were no grapefruits. When orange juice was invented, squeezers came on the market. Nobody knew anything about vitamins. People drank orange juice because it tasted good. Before that, they ate stewed prunes and applesauce.

In fact, in some parts of the country, apple pie was eaten for breakfast. Nobody was afraid of getting fat. The doctors had not yet discovered that obesity was a disease, although gluttony was a sin.

Ice cream was bought in a candy store. Nobody bought ice cream in a drugstore. Candy stores were generally run by Germans who also managed the better bakeries and restaurants, although the fanciest places were supposed to be French.

West Powers Seen Stymied In Effort to Bypass Nasser

CAIRO (AP) — Western governments will find it virtually impossible to turn the Suez Canal into an idle ditch by building more pipelines and supertankers.

Military, diplomatic and economic pressures have not shaken Egyptian President Nasser's grip on the strategic waterway. Some Western leaders are advocating all-out development of alternative routes to minimize Nasser's ability to blackmail the world through his control of the canal.

So far, three schemes have been proposed:

1. A pipeline through Turkey to the Mediterranean for oil from Iraq, Iran and the Persian Gulf.

2. Pipelines across southern Israel from the Gulf of Aqaba to the Mediterranean.

3. Building more supertankers so large they can take oil around Africa as cheaply as conventional tankers haul it through the Suez. But the Western demand for Middle Eastern oil is increasing at such a pace that even with this competition the Suez Canal will be a busy trafficway for many decades to come — at least until atomic energy begins to play a major role in powering industry.

Even without the threat of hostile Arab action, some alternative routes must be developed over the becoming a bottleneck, unable to cope with heavily increasing traffic.

Oil shipments from the Middle East to the West are expected to double in the next 10 years. In 1955, last full year the canal was in operation, 110 million tons of Middle Eastern oil went to the West. By the late 1960s this is expected to increase to over 250 million tons.

Of the 1955 total, only 65 million tons went through the Suez Canal. The waterway can handle more oil and bigger tankers if it is widened and deepened, and operations are made more efficient. But even the most optimistic experts cannot conceive of more than doubling the total oil tonnage via Suez.

In a decade that would still leave more than 120 million tons that must travel by alternative routes will have to be developed at high speed to absorb the surplus.

Not Many Need Help During Menopause

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

It is estimated that only five per cent of the nation's women need medical help during the menopause. The others either have mild symptoms or none at all.

Many are not aware of the change until it is all over. Yet it might make things a little easier if you can recognize some of the symptoms but do not worry about them.

Medical Care

As I have explained previously, the "traditional" hot flashes are not really traditional at all. Only 20 women out of every 100 experience them. And medical care will bring relief if it is necessary. There is, of course, a change in the monthly cycle. It may be skipped for one or two months and then return. Or, it may simply be of shorter duration.

This process of changing may take only a few months. In other cases, it may require a year or even two.

Physiological Change

Other symptoms sometimes accompany this physiological change, although in themselves they do not necessarily indicate the menopause.

These include headaches, fatigue, inability to sleep, palpitation and pains in the back or other joints. Perhaps there will be a numbness in the fingers and toes, stomach disturbances and bladder difficulties.

Sometimes night sweats accompany the menopause. And a woman may also be irritable and depressed.

Most of these symptoms are only temporary. Again, they may not be connected with this period of change at all.

They do, however, signal that something is amiss. They are a warning to see your doctor. Medical help is available, even for persons experiencing the menopause. If you need it, get it.

Fallout Fear Discounted by AEC Physician

BALTIMORE (AP) — An Atomic Energy Commission physician says Americans worried about the effects of fallout on their offspring are "running away from a shadow."

Dr. C. W. Schilling, deputy director of the AEC's Division of Biology and Medicine, said excessively hot baths can be as damaging to the human sex glands as radioactive fallout of the amount received in the last five years from the testing of atomic weapons.

He also noted that natural, or background, radiation from the earth's crust and from cosmic rays has been with us since the beginning of time and accounts for 4.3 roentgens (the radiation measurement comparable to an X-ray), or the biggest dose of radiation that the average person receives up to age 30.

X-ray and fluoroscope account for another three roentgens, Dr. Schilling said, while radioactive fallout—if testing of atomic weapons continues at the same rates as the last five years — accounts for only a tenth of a roentgen.

Ike Launches Drive To Aid Cancer Fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower Friday launched the American Cancer Society's drive for $30 million this year.

He did so in accepting the organization's symbolic sword of hope from a six-year old Indian girl, Joyce DeZeller, whose home is at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. The society said Joyce, who called at the White House in a colorful Indian costume, has been cured of cancer.

After the ceremony Eisenhower issued a proclamation designating April as cancer control month and urged public support of the fund raising drive.

The Highway Litterbugs Need Attention

With the arrival of spring, the litterbugs are starting to make a noticeable reappearance on Fayette County highways and even on Washington C. H. streets.

Whether they know it or not these individuals are violating a law which subjects them to a sizable fine.

Repeated warnings in the past have been made by Sheriff Hays and city officials but the number of careless motorists and others who throw papers, bottles and other debris on roads and streets seems to increase rather than become less.

With spring beginning to put on its fresh raiment as do most women, children and men, so should cities and villages and rural districts.

Municipal street cleaners are seldom able to keep up with the untidy habits of some citizens. In many cases such habits are not deliberate but reflect extreme carelessness and a lack of civic pride. The result is dirty streets, gutters and cluttered sidewalks, the mark of the litterbug's thoughtless habits.

The clean countryside in rural districts is unhappily made to look bad, also, by the habits of those who have no regard for appearance by disposing of their rubbish along highways and country roads.

This brings up another related problem

to which President Eisenhower referred recently in the suggestion that it would be a good idea for Congress to bring economic pressure on individual states to insure that proposed federal restrictions on highway business and advertising are enforced. He suggests that federal lawmakers authorize the treasury to withhold a portion of the federal funds allocated for road construction from those states which do not comply with government standards on the placing of billboards and roadside commercial establishments.

Maybe it would be better if states assumed the initiative in the matter. State government should always take the lead in serving the American people, whenever it is practicable to do so.

The Ohio General Assembly, for instance, should see to it that clear-cut regulations pertaining to billboards are set forth now. The State Highway Department could at least be authorized to follow general rules laid down by Congress, and to make allowances for such rules in blueprinting future construction. The Legislature ought to make it clear that in Ohio dangerously distracting and unseemly roadside advertising must be kept at a minimum.

The Fashions Change

By George Sokolsky

When we were all young, it was fashionable to have appendicitis and many died of it.

Then they changed its name to an appendectomy and blamed it all on castor oil. Now not so many die of it.

Instead now one has various forms of heart ailments, not the romantic kind that comes from unrequited love but the physical kind that comes from eating the wrong kind of foods.

Back when I was young, politicians smoked cigars, generally the two for a quarter kind, as that marked a man off as having moved a step up the ladder of life, the nickel cigar being for the common people.

Nowadays, even the most advanced gentlemen in public life smoke cigarettes, unfiltered or filtered, the ordinary size or king size, but according to the doctors cigarettes could give you cancer.

It used to be that cigarettes stunted the growth. A youth who smoked "cotton nails," as they were called, was not supposed to grow to be tall and to have hair on his chest.

Women did not smoke — certainly not in public. Of course, there were always the wrong kinds of women who should have been ashamed of themselves. They also put rouge on their cheeks which was the trade mark of an unmentionable profession that every boy learned about from other boys and contact with which was a sure cure for pimples and blackheads.

If a girl became one of those, she was not called a celebrity but was sure to meet a fate worse than death.

It was a very good era that worshipped robustness. A woman who had less on her frame than Jayne Mansfield was regarded as unsafe to marry lest she be susceptible to tuberculosis which was called consumption. When the doctors fancied up the names of these sicknesses, they charged more to cure them. Consumption was something to be feared, as many got it and it was one of the great revolutions in medicine when it was discovered that fresh air, eggs and milk were the best cure.

Nobody had yet discovered orange juice. In fact, oranges were a fruit that showed up around Christmas time. They were small; their skin was pitted; and one ate them gingerly lest their juice squirt into the eye.

There were no grapefruits. When orange juice was invented, squeezers came on the market. Nobody knew anything about vitamins. People drank orange juice because it tasted good. Before that, they ate stewed prunes and applesauce.

In fact, in some parts of the country, apple pie was eaten for breakfast. Nobody was afraid of getting fat. The doctors had not yet discovered that obesity was a disease, although gluttony was a sin.

Ice cream was bought in a candy store. Nobody bought ice cream in a drugstore. Candy stores were generally run by Germans who also managed the better bakeries and restaurants, although the fanciest places were supposed to be French.

Nobody objected to immigrants earning a living except in some places there used to be prejudices against the Irish, of whom it was said that they made the best household servants. Prejudices were regarded as normal among human beings who were accepted as imperfect and were not expected to be Gods on earth.

In fact, the most amusing humor was the dialect story and such really great actors as Joe Weber, Lou Fields, David Warfield and others of that generation built their careers on dialect, the most popular being the German, the Jewish and the Irish.

Today the dialect is more or less dead, having been killed by Hitler-scared small minds who are so lacking in a sense of humor that they can no longer laugh at themselves.

Nevertheless, the dialect is so natural an expression of human fun that when Menasha Skulnik plays on Broadway in a Bronx-bred sing-songy English, it is hard to get tickets at any price.

Of course, dialects change and the kind one hears nowadays, either authentic Brooklyn or third generation Bronx, is very different from the curious language of my childhood called English.

One can think of those good, unburied old days with some nostalgic sentimentality — particularly when one recalls a world without real hate in it. Who expected a Syrian peddler to sell an authentic Oriental carpet? Did we have to hate him because he tried to make a dishonest buck?

WHS Band Ready To Present Annual Concert Next Week

THE WHS BAND is shown here as it will appear on the high school auditorium stage next Thursday and Friday nights in its annual spring concert

The 101 boys and girls in the Washington C. H. High School Band today are looking forward to the reward for weeks of practice—the time when they take their places on the stage of the auditorium for the annual concert next Thursday and Friday nights.

This is a big event in the lives of the band members. It gives them a chance to show the people of the community what their band really is; a chance to perform before their families and friends. It also is a treat for the approximately 2,000 persons in audience.

They are proud of their band; they think it is the best—period. For 20 band members, this will be a last appearance with the band here. They are seniors and will leave their high school days and the band behind next May.

MAKING THEIR farewell appearance will be Ronnie Knisley, Danny Miller, Webb Ellis, Dale Fent, Doug Rider, Bob Burris, David Galliot, Larry Hurt, Linda Rice, Don Coulter, Blaine Rice, Jim Kirk, Jerry Crissinger, Duane Callender, Jerry Wright, Barbara Rose, Jane Meriwether, Sandra Gill, Gary Polk and Tom Rodenfelds.

FRENCH HORNS—Sarah Core, Judy Preston, Joan Knisley, Nancy Grim, Helen Ducey and Jean Ducey.

BARITONE SAXOPHONE—Benjamin Backenstoe.

BASE CLARINET—Kathie Wright, Maureen Smith.

CLARINETS—Susan Dray, Sandy Rose, Kay Minshall, Marilyn Miller, Jowanda Wilson, Jane Al-

bandmaster Robert Neumann, will be varied. It will include several marches, which always show off a band at its best. But there also will be some novelty numbers, popular tunes arranged especially for band performance, a couple of medleys and the classics.

The program also will feature a trumpet trio of Ron Knisley, Dan Miller and Webb Ellis and another of Blaine Rice, Jerry Crissinger and Duane Callender.

For a good many years, the band gave the concert on only one night, but because there always was an overflow crowd, it has been given recently on two nights—and the full houses both nights. As in the past, all seats will be reserved.

THE BAND this year is made up of:

TRUMPETS—Ronnie Knisley, Danny Miller, Webb Ellis, Dale Fent, Doug Rider, Bob Burris, David Galliot, Larry Hurt, Linda Rice, Don Coulter, Blaine Rice, Jim Kirk, Jerry Crissinger, Duane Callender, Jerry Wright, Barbara Rose, Jane Meriwether, Sandra Gill, Gary Polk and Tom Rodenfelds.

FRENCH HORNS—Sarah Core, Judy Preston, Joan Knisley, Nancy Grim, Helen Ducey and Jean Ducey.

BARITONE SAXOPHONE—Benjamin Backenstoe.

BASE CLARINET—Kathie Wright, Maureen Smith.

CLARINETS—Susan Dray, Sandy Rose, Kay Minshall, Marilyn Miller, Jowanda Wilson, Jane Al-

kire, Linda Halliday, Patti Knedler, L. tricia Robinson, Ronald Coffman, Dixie Coe, Paulette Pennington, Judy Lundberg, Paula Slagle, Randy M a n n, Ann McDonald, Ann Johnson, Ruth Ann Arnold, Carol Pitzer, Edith Bach, Nancy Hurler.

TENOR SAXOPHONES—Wilma Brown, Earl Palmer, Linda Loudner, Pat Scott, Becky Graves, Dorothy Cunningham, Ros a lyn Martind, Tom Baer.

BAND MANAGER—Bill Dresbaugh, Wanda Tracey.

TROMBONES—Nancy Reno, Byron Palmer, David Korn, Henry Rosman, Randy Trace, Dennis Orner, Gilbert Thomas, Di a n e Thompson.

OBOES—Janice Gillen, Janet Ellis.

ALT. SAXOPHONE—Jean Persinger, Sara Terhune, Jane Davis, John Leland, Shirley Milstead, Joy Polk.

SOUSAPHONES—Bob Moats, Ronald Merritt, Ronnie Johns, Joe Coulter, Bill Edmonson, Jack McDaniel, Bob Edgington, Larry Bennett.

BASSOON—Frank Miller.

The Doctor's the One with the Red Carnation

By JACK AYER
Looking for a doctor? Speak to the man with the red carnation. If you do, chances are you'll find he's one of the 14 members of the Fayette County Medical Assn. They've all been decked out with lapel flowers by their wives today, in honor of National Doctor's Day, being observed all over the country.

The wives, who make up the Medical Assn. Auxiliary pinned the carnations on their spouses before sending them off to work this morning. And—if they have any consideration for wifely recognition—the doctors will be wearing the flowers all day.

It all came as a surprise, too. The girls got their heads together, cooked up the carnation gimmick, and pinned on the flowers before their husbands knew what was happening.

LESS SPECTACULAR but a lot more important in the long run, is another activity the wives have undertaken to do honor to their husbands: on Doctor's Day this year. They've put up $800 to buy two new dictaphones and a transcriber for Fayette Memorial Hospital, to be used in a fullscale revamp of the medical records system there.

Purchased with money from bridge parties sponsored by the auxiliary during the past year, the equipment will enable the hospital to get more neat and more thorough records more quickly than has been possible before. They'll be a great time-saver to the hospital and the doctors both, Hospital Administrator Christine Evans said.

Mrs. Byers Shaw, Mrs. Hugh Payton and Mrs. Marvin Roszmann supervised the fund-raising parties.

Acclaimed by the Joint Commission of Hospital Accreditation for the boost this equipment can make possible in good patient care, the new gadgets are already in operation at the hospital.

"ALL THE MONEY we've made from the bridge parties has gone into this equipment," Mrs. N. M. Reiff, president of the auxiliary declared. "We chose the dictaphones with the idea of getting the best equipment we could for the money we had," she added.

As for the carnations?
"Well," said Mrs. Reiff, "Doctors have been subject to a lot of controversy in recent years — some pretty bitter attacks."
"We just want to show them that they still count with us."

Farmers See Take, Costs Both Climb
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department says farm product prices increased 1 per cent between mid-February and mid-March.

This upturn partly offset a 2 per cent decline in the previous month. At the same time, however, prices paid by farmers for goods and services used in production and in family living increased about one-third of 1 per cent to a new record.

Only Half of Ohio Counties To Hold Primary Poll in May

COLUMBUS (AP)—Only half of Ohio's 88 counties will hold primary elections in one or more municipalities on May 7, Secretary of State Ted W. Brown reported today.

The 1957 figure, much lower than usual, compares with 54 in 1953 and 52 in 1955, more recent so-called "odd year" primary elections.

Brown said that changes in Ohio's election laws which have tended to reduce the number of primary elections in many municipalities were not intended to "stifle competition" among candidates within the two political parties, but, rather, were enacted to save time and expense to the taxpayer in cases where opposition was lacking.

Some municipalities will not hold primaries in May due to the fact that they are under 2,000 population in which the law does not provide for party candidates. Therefore, all candidates must file nominating petitions. Also, in municipalities over 2,000, there are cases where all the candidates filed by nominating petition, rather than by declarations of candidacy as partisan candidates. Their names will go on the November ballot.

In cases where there is no opposition in any office to be filled in either or both of the parties, one or both Republican or Democratic primaries have been eliminated, Brown said. He also pointed to another great saving effected by a law enacted by the 101st General Assembly in 1955, but which became operative for the first time this year:

This change provides that a city-wide primary need not be held when the contest is only for ward councilman, the primary only needing to be scheduled in that ward where opposition developed and only for that office.

Thirty per cent of the accidents in the home occur in the kitchen-dining room area while only four per cent happen in the bathroom.

You Too Busy To Be a Good Cook in Home?

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Too busy to be a good cook? Nonsense, says Lillian Langseth-Christensen, of New Milford, Conn. She commutes five hours daily, works like a dynamo painting murals and designing interiors of some of New York's most imposing skyscrapers, runs a perfectly appointed home in the country, entertains like mad, caters to the demands of a husband and two children and gets out a new kind of culinary service, "Look and Cook," a king-size cookbook with continuing monthly supplements.

With her collaborator, Tatiana McKenna, another accomplished gourmet, she thought up the new cookbook as an aid to women with the same problems as her own—a love of gracious entertaining and good food, and not enough time to dawdle in the kitchen.

This slim, brunette whirlwind now has her own life so organized that she devotes one day a week to preparing seven days' meals, freezes them out, stores them and whips them out on schedule with only a few minutes added preparation needed.

"I had to do it this way," says Lillian, "and the system has helped me so much that I thought it only fair to pass along what I learned. In these days when most women are so busy, they either are completely floored by the prospect of cooking, or they become inventive."

Scioto Gambling Report Decried

PORTSMOUTH (AP)—Gov. C. William O'Neill's comment that the Scioto County area would be investigated for gambling has brought flat denials of the existence of commercialized gambling from officials.

The denials came in separate statements from Sheriff Burl Justice and Mayor Vernald Riffe and Police Chief Fred Brown of nearby New Boston.

Brooklyn Pulls Old Trick of 2 Men on Base

Rookie Pinch-Runner Embarrassed, but Forces In Big Run

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Turn back the clock, if you will, almost three decades.

Remember the Brooklyn Dodgers of, say, 1930. One of their favorite tricks was for one of them to steal a base already occupied by one of their mates.

Rookie Joe Pignatano of the Dodgers tried it in Friday's exhibition game with the New York Yankees at St. Petersburg, Fla. He was sent in as a pinch-runner for Rube Walker, who had doubled home a run in the ninth inning. What confused Pignatano was that two Brooks were on base when Walker delivered his blast.

Joe saw them both score. But he didn't see that Sandy Amoros was sent back to third base because of a ground rule.

Manager Fred Haney of the Milwaukee Braves received a note of encouragement from two of his question mark pitchers — Chet Nichols and Gene Conley combined for a 6-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals at Bradenton.

At Clearwater, Fla., Philly ace Robin Roberts went the distance and faced only 18 batters in the last five innings to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 5-4. At Tampa, veteran Warren Hacker went all the way for the Redlegs in stopping the Washington Senators, 7-2.

Rookie outfielder Harry Anderson clouted a home run for the Phillies. Sherman Lollar into one for the Sox. Pete Whisenant and Art Shult hit homers for the Redlegs.

Lee Walls won the game for the Pirates with a two-run homer. Herb Score went five innings for the Indians and was effective except for a homer by Ted Williams.

Personal Duels Due To Spice Pro Cage Tilt

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Russell-Bob Pettit and Bob Cousy-Slater Martin personal duels were expected to spice today's opener in the National Basketball Assn. final playoff series between Boston and St. Louis.

The best-of-seven set was expected to be viewed by a capacity crowd at Boston Garden and a nationwide television audience.

Neither club ever has reached the finals prior to this season.

Boston rookie sensation Russell, the agile 6-10 giant, was ready to match his unparalleled defensive skill against the league's second best scorer, Pettit.

Pettit averaged 24.7 points a game during the regular season.

Pettit, who has shed the cast which had been on his left wrist since it was injured in a collision with Boston's Jim Loscutoff six weeks ago, and Russell are both great rebounders.

The match of centers is supplemented by the test of veteran guards Cousy and Martin who have played each other defensively for years.

On the record, Boston finished its NBA campaign with a 44-28 mark compared to St. Louis' 34-38. The Celtics held a 7-2 edge over the Hawks.

Both swept their semifinal series in three games against Syracuse and Minneapolis, respectively.

The second game will be played here Sunday and the next two in St. Louis next weekend.

Eddie Cobb Presents Views On Claiming Race Question

EDITOR'S NOTE: The complex question of claiming races for horses is discussed by Eddie Cobb, 917 Washington Ave., in this article reprinted by permission from The Horseman and Fair World magazine. Cobb, for years one of the country's top trainers and drivers, is now with part of his stable at De Leon Springs, near Orlando, Fla. Some of his horses were wintered at the Fairgrounds here. Cobb is a son-in-law of McKinley Kirk, who was the country's leading amateur driver in 1935.

By EDDIE COBB

Claiming races must come and will when given the proper chance. As I have favored claiming races for a long time, the articles which have appeared in the horse papers lately have been very interesting to me.

The views that I will express in this article have been picked up from conversations with many horsemen from all over the country. More and more horsemen believe that claiming races are the answer to our problems.

The minute claiming races are mentioned, some horsemen automatically think of a race for old horses and cripples. Actually, they have been the only horses you could start in them as most claiming races have had no conditions to take care of this situation.

I mean by this, it is impossible to make up a claiming race for any specified price and allow horses from all of the various groups to enter.

This only defeats the purpose as you cannot expect a man with a 2:06 3-year-old to enter a 2:06 4-year-old and take the same price, so only the man with the 2:06 4-year-old can afford to enter the race. If the man with the 2:06 3-year-old enters in an open race of higher value, the competition will be so tough he won't be able to earn any money and he can't afford to enter in a cheaper race where he might win as his colt is worth more money.

THE FACTORS which must be taken into consideration in writing claiming races are simple but very important. First of all, keeping the various age, class and sex groups separate, if possible, and only using mixed races when there is a shortage of horses in a class. When possible, have races for various prices ranging from $20,000 down to the lowest grade of horses which the different managements wish to have or must have racing at their tracks and still have sufficient horses to fill their races.

The various classes are 2-year-olds, 3-year-olds, green 2-, 4- and 5-year-olds, seasoned 4-, 5-, 6- and 7-year-olds, and 8-year-olds and over.

If mixed races must be used, of course fillies and mares will automatically be allowed 25 to 50 per cent over geldings. Besides this, 3-year-olds should go in for 50 per cent more than older horses and 2-year-olds for twice as much as the older horses.

FIRST, the basic speed of the race should be determined, for example, 2:06. Next, the value of horses from various groups used to fill this mixed race should be decided, say $5,000 base. Now, certainly a sound 3-year-old capable of going in 2:06 is worth 50 per cent more than an older horse capable of the same time.

Two-year-olds would, of course, very rarely be used but if a man wished to race a 2:06 2-year-old in this race, he would be entitled to get twice as much for him as a man with an 8-year-old.

The man writing the conditions for any specified track should, in fairness to himself, the management, and horsemen, call the owners and trainers together to help him write these conditions so they will be acceptable and inviting to them.

UNDER ALL systems of classification that have ever been tried, when a horse advances to a class in which he can no longer profitably compete, the problem always arises as to how this horse can be fairly "backed up" the term most popularly used by all) and how and when it should be done.

We should all be willing to face the fact that when our horse reaches this point, he should then race in claiming races. Why? Because he should no longer have to fill races for the top flight material which is winning its way down through the A, B, and C classes at the expense of horses who are destined to always be A, B, C horses.

To me, this is the most unfair part of our racing today. Five thousand dollar horses just should not have to race against horses worth $25,000 on up.

We don't have to worry about what to do with top grade horses in any division whether it be 2-3-year-olds, green horses or AA's and faster as they can take care of themselves. It is the in-between horses that need help. Our claiming races would be made up of these A, B, and C horses and $2,500, $5,000, $7,500 and even up to $20,000 2- and 3-year-olds who did not wish to follow the top horses around all summer.

A horse of stake caliber should race in stakes for the big money and let the horses of lesser ability compete against each other, at the proper level.

Every trainer in the country who races horses which are not staked has the same problem. We race part of the time against horses of the same caliber as our own but it seems much of the time, we race against horses they have little or no chance of beating.

I HAVE long heard trainers and owners complain about having to turn their investment over to someone else to manage. Actually, this is true to a certain extent but there has been no really fair way come up yet to remedy the situation.

We will all agree that management couldn't just allow the horsemen to classify their own horses with no strings attached as surely it would be much worse than anything we have tried in the past.

My idea is to let the owners and trainers group their horses as they wish to and as they no doubt should be entitled to, as they surely know the ability of their particular horses better than anyone else. In the past, in a good many cases, it has been a penalty to win a race or races as your horse was advanced to a class where he could not longer race profitably and had to race a certain number of races or a certain period of time or until someone decided that he was in too tough before he got relief.

I believe, as I said before, in letting the owners and trainers classify, group or enter their horses where they think they belong and the penalty for classifying your horse too easily would be that you would lose him.

This is the surest method of keeping horses in their proper groups that I can think of. It is fair to all and a system that no one can take advantage of for very long. After all a horse that isn't a stake horse or top grade animal is worth just what he can earn, mares and a few stallions excepted.

UNDER THIS SYSTEM, a horse would no longer be penalized for winning but rather the owners and trainers would be penalized if they kept putting their horses in against inferior competition. I don't believe that claiming races should be races for horses someone wants to get rid of but rather they should be merely the yardstick used to grade the horses in the different age and class brackets.

I believe that when management makes up its mind to let the horsemen classify their own horses with a free hand and the penalty being that if they classify their horses too easily, they will lose them, it is the perfect check and balance we have been looking for.

Delvin Miller proposed a very sound idea last fall in California concerning claiming races. He believes a horse's racing equipment should go with every horse claimed to keep performance charts in line on horse which have been claimed.

I realize it is going to take time for some people to agree with the ideas expressed in this article but if a proportionate number of races, say two or three paces and one trot every day, at all meetings were tried, I believe that more and more horsemen would soon agree that claiming races are the fairest method to group any certain class of horses.

Not a trace of soreness and I can get the ball where I want it better.

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The booming bat of big Joe Adcock is the talk of the Milwaukee Braves training camp.

The lanky first baseman Friday belted a 430-foot homer, his fourth of the drills. He's driven in 15 runs and has a batting average of .394.

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Ron Samford who spent most of the winter in the Puerto Rican League appears a good bet to stay with the Detroit Tigers as a utility infielder.

"He can play short, second or third," said Manager Jack Tighe, "and he isn't too bad with the bat."

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals' two biggest problems — centerfield and the wildness of Vinegar Bend Mizell — appeared no closer to solution today.

The centerfield situation is back where it was before rookie Bobby Gene Smith took command. Smith hitless in his last 12 trips, is batting only .222. Bobby Del Greco, a defensive master, is at .105 and Chuck Harmon, the third contender, is hitting only .205.

Mizell issued three walks in the first inning and yielded a three-run homer to Joe Adcock Friday.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles are experimenting with bonus player Jim Pyburn as a catcher.

If Pyburn who came up to the Orioles as a third baseman in 1955 can make the move, he'll battle Joe Ginsberg and Rookie Tom Patton for the No. 2 catching spot behind slugger Gus Triandos.

Dr. Homer L. Hitt, head of the Institute of Population Research, predicts U. S. population of 19 million persons 65 years of age and over by 1970.

Brooklyn Pulls Old Trick of 2 Men on Base

Rookie Pinch-Runner Embarrassed, but Forces In Big Run

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Turn back the clock, if you will, almost three decades.

Remember the Brooklyn Dodgers of, say, 1930. One of their favorite tricks was for one of them to steal a base already occupied by one of their mates.

Rookie Joe Pignatano of the Dodgers tried it in Friday's exhibition game with the New York Yankees at St. Petersburg, Fla. He was sent in as a pinch-runner for Rube Walker, who had doubled home a run in the ninth inning. What confused Pignatano was that two Brooks were on base when Walker delivered his blast.

Joe saw them both score. But he didn't see that Sandy Amoros was sent back to third base because of a ground rule.

Pignatano broke for third. Halfway down, he realized third base was occupied by Amoros, and he stopped dead in embarrassment. He was run down, but Amoros scored the Dodgers' third run. And that's how the game ended: Yanks 4, Dodgers 3.

Manager Fred Haney of the Milwaukee Braves received a note of encouragement from two of his question mark pitchers — Cheet Nichols and Gene Conley combined for a 6-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals at Bradenton.

At Clearwater, Fla., Philly ace Robin Roberts went the distance and faced only 18 batters in the last five innings to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 5-4. At Tampa, veteran Warren Hacker went all the way for the Redlegs in stopping the Washington Senators, 7-2.

Rookie outfielder Harry Anderson clouted a home run for the Phillies. Sherman Lollar into one for the Sox. Pete Whisenant and Art Shult hit homers for the Redlegs.

Elsewhere, the New York Giants defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 4-2, at Scottsdale, Ariz.; the Pittsburgh Pirates halted the Detroit Tigers, 6-5, at Lakeland; the Cleveland Indians humbled the Boston Red Sox, 7-1, at Tucson, Ariz.; the Kansas City A's turned back the Buffalo Bisons of the International League, 6-3, at West Palm Beach, and the Chicago Cubslicked Memphis in Mesa, 8-2.

Lee Walls won the game for the Pirates with a two-run homer. Herb Score went five innings for the Indians and was effective except for a homer by Ted Williams.

Personal Duels Due To Spice Pro Cage Tilt

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Russell-Bob Pettit and Bob Cousy-Slater Martin personal duels were expected to spice today's opener in the National Basketball Assn. final playoff series between Boston and St. Louis.

The best-of-seven set was expected to be viewed by a capacity crowd at Boston Garden and a nationwide television audience.

Neither club ever has reached the finals prior to this season. Boston rookie sensation Russell, the agile 6-10 giant, was ready to match his unparalleled defensive skill against the league's second best scorer, Pettit.

On the record, Boston finished its NBA campaign with a 44-28 mark compared to St. Louis' 34-38. The Celtics held a 7-2 edge over the Hawks.

Both swept their semifinal series in three games against Syracuse and Minneapolis, respectively.

The second game will be played here Sunday and the next two in St. Louis next weekend.

Finsterwald's Lead Trimmed in Azalea

WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP) — Dow Finsterwald's at times unruly putter and a determined Arnold Palmer have combined to make the $12,500 Azalea Open Golf tournament very much of a contest going into today's third round.

Finsterwald, the 27-year-old Athens, Ohio, pro who grabbed a three-stroke lead with a first day 66, could do no better than 70 Friday and held a one-shot lead with his 136 total for 36 holes.

Palmer, 1954 National Amateur champion, now a professional playing from Latrobe, Pa., came up with a 67, the best score of the second round, to bring his total to 137 going into the last two days of tourney play.

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The Chicago White Sox tangle with the Pittsburgh Pirates today and will be without the services of Bubba Phillips.

Phillips, a converted outfielder who has played some pretty good third base for the Sox this spring, has an infected right foot and has been sidelined indefinitely.

TUCSON, Ariz., (AP) — If determination means anything, Jerry Kindall, Chicago Cub bonus player from the University of Minnesota, is going to stick in the big leagues.

While the Cubs trained at Mesa, Kindall was out taking special batting practice every day after an exhibition game. There wasn't anyone else around so Kindall settled for a throwing machine to serve his pitches.

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Left-hander Curt Simmons of the Philadelphia Phillies believes he is ready for his best season since 1950, when he won 18 as the Phils took the National League pennant.

Logart Collects Win over Turner

NEW YORK (AP) — Isaac Logart's campaign for a title shot at welter-weight champion Carmen Basilio had support today.

The backing came after the fast-punching 23-year old invader racked up his second straight unanimous decision over aggressive Gil Turner in a rousing 10-round televised scrap at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Turner, tired from another one of his all-out, full steam ahead thrillers, didn't have enough left in the final three rounds, however, and Logart swept to the front for keeps with his raking left hooks to the body and head.

Jim Hegan only Cinch Bet On Cleveland Indian Roster

Editor's Note: Here is another in a series of articles dealing with the 1957 major league baseball season.

By JERRY LISKA
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — With new manager Kerby Farrell shuffling his Cleveland Indian aces like a riverboat gambler, the only part of the Cleveland lineup for opening day which could be given now is: "Hegan catching."

That's how much Farrell has tipped his hand for the 1957 American League campaign. "I know I'm taking over a second-place club that had great pitching and poor hitting last year," the successor to Al Lopez said today. "I know the New York Yankees are ahead of us and at least three clubs are pushing us. And I know we got to get some hitting and some speed to gain any ground."

So far, just veteran catcher Jim Hegan, first sacker Vic Wertz and Al Smith, playing somewhere, seem fairly certain of opening day call.

Seasoned infielder George Strickland, a .211 hitter who has been banging the ball solidly this spring, could be a starter.

Thus far, Farrell has concentrated on Billy Farrell, up from Indianapolis; Bob Usher, a .350-hitting outfielder for San Diego last year; and veteran second baseman Bobby Avila at third base.

Strickland has played both at

Frisco Club To Test Fliers In AAU Meet

DENVER (AP) — San Francisco Olympic Club, winner once before back in 1915, and the U. S. Air Force All-Stars play tonight for the championship of the 50th AAU Basketball Tournament.

The airmen, getting top performances from Dick Boushka and Ron Tomsic of the 1956 U. S. Olympic team, ousted Seattle's defending champions, 84-63 in Friday night's semifinals.

The San Franciscans whipped Peoria, Ill., 70-61, in a tremendous comeback after trailing 13 points in the first half.

Peoria and Seattle play for third place in tonight's first game.

Boushka pumped in 22 points and Tomsic added 20 in guiding the Air Force team to its decisive triumph.

The airmen led by only 50-47 in the second half, but with 11 minutes to play Boushka, Tomsic and Dick Welsh touched off an air force spree that left Seattle trailing, 62-49, with 8:37 left. The servicemen pulled steadily away after that.

Unable to find the range in the opening minutes, the San Francisco Olympic Club fell back 22-9 midway of the first half.

The Californians started gaining at that point but couldn't pull even with last year's winners until nearly four minutes had been played in the second half.

After it was deadlocked 39-39 the score was tied 11 more times before San Francisco went in front to stay.

Circleville Books Harness Matinee

CIRCLEVILLE (AP) — The fourth annual Harness Horse Racing Matinee will be held at Pickaway Fairgrounds here April 28.

The Sunday afternoon event, sponsored by the Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be staged for the benefit of the Jaycee fund for a new grandstand.

John Fissell, spokesman for the Jaycees, said eight heats will be scheduled. Local merchants and Hilliards Raceway will provide prizes for winners. Col. Willison Leist will serve as announcer and Briggs Mercer and his mobile gate will be official starter.

Dr. Homer L. Hitt, head of the Institute of Population Research, predicts U. S. population of 19 million persons 65 years of age and over by 1970.

second base and at shortstop where Chico Carrasquel is battling to hold his job after a .243 batting average last season. Another shortstop candidate is Larry Raines, who hit .309 for Farrell at Indianapolis last year.

The key to Farrell's outfield plans may be rookie Roger Maris, up from Indianapolis with a .293 average. If Smith doesn't play center, Maris would have to beat out seasoned Jim Busby or Usher there. In left, Maris Chief competition, is another, Gene Woodling, while Rocco Colavito has the edge in right field.

Farrell is confident that Early Wynn, a 20-game Tribe winner last year with Herb Score and Bob Lemon, will be in shape when the season starts. Wynn, 37, has been sidelined with a pulled hip tendon.

Spring Hunting Season Studied

Test by Florida Seen Key to New Planning

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Spring hunting seasons are getting another scrutiny by many wildlife managers harassed by the increasing pressure of providing more and more recreation with the same — and even declining — game resources.

By and large, spring hunting fell from favor in the public mind back in the days when market hunting was getting all the blame for shattering the migratory bird population.

And now Florida is the site of a full dress experiment, with a 10-day turkey gobbler season opening Saturday. The state will open its second and third conservation districts, in northern Florida, to the frankly experimental hunt.

Bag limits — gobblers only — will be two a day, and they will count in the 1956-57 season bag limit of three. In other words, hunters who took their season limit previously will be ineligible to hunt.

In this way, the spring bird seasons fall into the big game post-season system pioneered in the western states, where managed harvesting really got its full start.

The big test in Florida is whether large numbers of hunters can — or need — to be closely supervised to make sure they don't slaughter hens, whether bag limits and other regulations are readily enforceable and whether the harvest can be controlled for flock — culling of unneeded Toms the benefit of the entire Turkey flock — culling of unneeded Toms to make room on the range for additional youngsters this spring.

This latter is the main reason for the interest in spring hunts. Where range is the limiting factor in game populations, its just good medicine to crop the overage surplus rather than leave it to compete with the new crop.

Stengel Angered at Idea Yanks Have Pennant Cinched

Editor's Note: Here is another in a series of articles surveying prospects for 1957 major league teams.

By JOE REICHLER
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — If you mention the word "runaway" to Casey Stengel you'd better be prepared to do just that.

The manager of the New York Yankees seethes whenever he is asked how soon he expects to wrap up the American League pennant.

"I'm sick and tired of listening to all this silly talk about the Yankees having a cinch this year," he said. "It's bad for me, it's bad for my men and it's bad for everybody in baseball."

"All I can say about that is 'nuts.' You think the Cleveland club with Herb Score and all those great pitchers, and Detroit with Al Kaline and Harvey Kuenn and all those other hitting fools, and Chicago under the fine leadership of Al Lopez are going to pack their bags and quit? Not on your life."

"If my pitchers have any idea somebody is going to hand them 20 victories apiece, or if my hitters think they're all going to be guaranteed .300 seasons, they'd better forget it. Just let any of my guys let down for one minute and I'll ship him so far he'll need a visa to get back to this country."

His warning duly issued, the unpredictable Stengel immediately changed character and offered all

All-Star Baseball Contest Planned

COLUMBUS (AP) — Arrangements for selecting two 30-man squads to participate in the Ohio high school East-West All Star baseball series here June 29-30 were made Friday at the annual clinic of the Ohio High School Athletic Assn. baseball coaches.

Coaches will select members of the squads by balloting. The series will be played in Jet Stadium here. Jack Moore of Columbus East High School was elected president of the association for 1957. Duke St. John of West Lafayette was elected first vice president and Harold Slack of Zanesville second vice president. Richard Hindman of Columbus North was elected secretary-treasurer.

sorts of reasons why his athletes should repeat as American League champions.

"This team of mine is better equipped to win the pennant than my '36 team," he said. "I'm not saying it's the best team I ever managed but it could be. My pitchers became of age in the World Series last fall. And it looks like we picked up two more good ones from Kansas City (Art Ditmar and Bobby Shantz).

"I got the best catcher, shortstop and center fielder in baseball. I'm solid at first base, second base and right field. They tell me I'm not so well off at third base and in left field but don't you believe it. I've got five guys who can play left field and do a good job. And I've got four different infielders. I have men who can play all positions. In fact, I'm training them to play all nine positions."

Even Mantle's recent injury, a sprained ankle, failed to dampen Stengel's spirits.

"Everybody's worried but me," Casey said. "He'll be all right when the gong rings, you can bet on that."

Salvation Army To Meet Tuesday

Reports To Be Made
On Work in County

A report on the past year's welfare program of the Salvation Army in Fayette County will be made at the annual business meeting of its Fayette County Service Unit at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at the County Club Drive-in Restaurant at W. Elm St. and Route 70.

The key reports are expected to be made by Miss Hattie B. Pinkerton, visiting teacher of the county school system; Miss Gretchen Darlington, senior nurse of the Health Department, and Mrs. Beryl Cockerill, head of the county Welfare Department.

Miss Pinkerton's work has been among the less fortunate children in the rural area; Miss Darlington has been among those who needed medical or dental care and Mrs. Cockerill's has been among stranded transients and children in Washington C. H. However, their services have been so closely related and interwoven that the dividing lines were indistinct.

W. J. HILTY, county school superintendent and chairman of the county committee of the Salvation Army, said the service unit here helped clothe many children here last year in addition to helping many families through trying and difficult times. At Christmastime, he said, more than 40 prisoners in the county jail and state prisons were remembered with small gifts. Several burned-out families were given furniture, bedding and other household goods and re-established in living quarters and "many other humanitarian services were rendered the needy and distressed families and individuals in the county," he added.

Major Clarence Simmons, in charge of the men's social service department of the Salvation Army at Dayton, will be here to speak to the committee and outline the Salvation Army's overall program.

Major Simmons, who went to Dayton last year from Providence, R. I., has spent more than 20 years in the Salvation Army and has had many varied and unusual experiences in his work with thousands of men, many of them human derelicts.

Robert H. Olinger is treasurer of the county unit. Other committee members are Marion A. Rife, Ellsworth Vannorsdall, Delbert Morris, Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Perrill, Joe D. Campbell, Miss Pinkerton, Mrs. Cockerill, Gilbert C. Crouse, Miss Darlington, Ellet Kaufman, Howard S. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. John Sheeley, Harold E. Thomas, Robert F. Angus, Homer Emery, Robert E. Creamer, Wilson W. Webb, Miss Jean M. Everhart.

to be a way to go around that."

"But a much more important fact—the most important, I think—is that the parents of the offenders haven't been doing a good job."

"It's not that they don't want to. I think every parent wants to. It's more that they just don't know how."

"Often, the parents aren't setting a good example for the children. They're in trouble themselves, so the kids can't see anything wrong with it."

"After all, if you tell a 15-year-old girl to stop running around with men when she knows perfectly well her mother is doing the same thing, it's not going to have any effect on her."

"In other cases, the parents have been too lenient—either because they didn't know any better, or because it was an easy way out."

"BROKEN HOME children produce some trouble. If the child of divorced parents feels loved by both, there won't be any trouble, but if there's a conflict, there can be plenty."

"Sometimes, the children are just plain misunderstood. The parents think they are doing the right thing—they just don't understand."

"We can be pretty sure of this much, though: responsible parents who have their children's love and respect aren't too likely to find their children in trouble."

Builders Hail Cuts in FHA Down Payment

WASHINGTON (AP)—Builders and housing officials were cheered today by President Eisenhower's restoration of 5 per cent down payments on home purchases financed by government-insured mortgages.

But they predicted stronger medicine will be needed to cure the housing slump of the past 18 months.

Eisenhower Friday ordered the Federal Housing Administration to cut the down payment from 7 to 5 per cent on the first $9,000 of the value of a new or old home bought with an FHA-insured mortgage, and from 27 to 25 per cent on the balance up to $20,000.

He also moved to relax a restriction on home mortgages by savings and loan associations.

Meanwhile, support was building up in Congress for further easing of home buying credit.

Brigged Marine Going to Court

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A brigged Marine has gone to law about it in what may be a unique case.

Pfc. Douglas Martin, 22, petitioned U. S. District Judge Joseph P. Lieb Friday for a writ of habeas corpus. Martin contended through his lawyer, Frank B. Byron, that he has been held in the Miami Marine Corps Air Station brig since March 14 without charge and illegally by Col. George E. Lepping, provost marshal.

Lieb set Monday for hearing Lepping's explanation of why Martin remains in the brig.

British Cabinet Split Seen As Lord Salisbury Resigns

LONDON (AP)—The Marquess of Salisbury's resignation protesting release of Greek-Cypriot Archbishop Makarios focussed attention today on a cabinet rift over the government's handling of the explosive Cyprus issue.

The announcement that Salisbury had quit his cabinet post as leader of government forces in the House of Lords came Friday night. Prime Minister Macmillan's office reported that Queen Elizabeth II had accepted his resignation as council president.

Salisbury also quit as political controller of Britain's atomic energy development. Macmillan's statement said the Earl of Home, commonwealth relations secretary, will take over as council president and the prime minister himself will assume the atomic energy post.

Informed sources said Salisbury was backed by some other ministers in his opposition to the release of Makarios.

Salisbury, a 63-year-old former foreign minister, was believed to have been one of the masterminds in the Conservative Party's efforts to find a successor for Anthony Eden as prime minister.

Mainly About People

Mrs. Harley Haggard is staying with her sister, Mrs. H. E. Louis, New Holland, for an indefinite period.

Pamela Jo Williams, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buren Williams, 912 S. Main St., broke her arm while at play at the Eber School. She was treated at the office of Dr. Joseph M. Herbert and released.

Common Pleas Judge John P. Case was in Portsmouth Saturday, hearing a civil case in the Scioto County court. He will hear civil cases in Madison County Monday and Tuesday on assignment from Chief Justice Carl V. Weygand.

Pat Cutlip, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cutlip, 728 Washington Ave., will dance on television at noon Sunday over channel 6. A senior at Washington C. H. High School, Miss Cutlip will do a dance created by her teacher, Richard Kimball.

Here's a partial list of Washington C. H. folks who showed up at the State basketball tournament in Columbus: Bob Shaw, Harry Townsend, Herb Russell, David Baughn, Thurman Sheppard, Ben Wright, Bob Wise, Paul Crosby, Fred Rost, Bud Brownell, L. Good Will Grange To 'Go Along' with Lunch Proposal

Good Will Grangers have agreed, after some discussion, "to go along with other Granges of the county" in operating a lunchroom in the Producers Stockyards here when the building expansion program there is completed.

Action was taken by the Grange at its meeting in Grange Hall at Madison Mills after Mrs. Madge Winters, Pomona Grange lecturer, had explained the proposition.

There are six subordinate Granges in the county and, under the plan outlined at the meeting, they would take turns manning the lunch room at the stockyards every Tuesday when the weekly auctions are held.

Jerry Nessell, manager of the stockyards, said the building program is now nearing completion. Included in it is a lunchroom, complete with kitchen equipment and counter.

THE MEETING was presided over by Master Herschel Pendleton.

Miss Patty Hunter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hunter, was inducted into the third and fourth degrees. The Hunter family now lives in Columbus although membership in the Good Will Grange is retained.

Roscoe Whiteside, county deputy, reviewed the plans for the annual Grange drill and degree competition held Friday night at Five Points in Pickaway County.

Good Will Grange entered a team, but the results were not known at the time the meeting was in progress at Madison Mills.

Following the meeting, the Grangers—plus the juvenile Grangers who held their meeting on the second floor—went to the Bailey Restaurant a few miles east on the CCC Highway for refreshments.

Ohio Gasoline Station Men Outline Fears

WASHINGTON (AP)—Some independent Ohio gasoline station operators are complaining that their suppliers are discriminating against them on the price of the things they buy and other matters.

A House small business subcommittee said today the allegations have been numerous enough to justify holding a hearing in Cleveland May 18.

Cleveland will be one of several cities where the subcommittee, headed by Rep. Roosevelt (D-Calif.), will go.

"The complaints have not come just from Cleveland, however," said Joseph L. Nellis, special counsel for the subcommittee.

"We'll also hear from retailers from Cincinnati, Toledo, Dayton, Columbus and Canton."

At this stage, Nellis said, the subcommittee is not stating that the allegations are justified.

But as Nellis described it, Ohio retail operators allege that some big oil companies are:

1. Unfairly cancelling their leases.

2. Making them buy given brands of tires, batteries and accessories instead of makes of their choice from independent firms.

3. Charging them higher prices for gasoline and oil than those given local competitors.

Rayburn Advice

The Texan's advice not to send Congress a special letter asking for presidential disability legislation.

Instead, Atty. Gen. Brownell will go before a House Judiciary Subcommittee Monday to spell out the administration proposal.

Rayburn was said to have told the President the country has gotten along very well through the years without special arrangements for temporary succession to the presidency.

The Texan argued that if Eisenhower were to send up a special letter on the subject it would lead to a lot of talk that he is in poor condition and is preparing to relinquish the presidency.

The Constitution provides that the Vice President shall take over the duties of the President in the event of the President's resignation, ouster, death or disability. But it does not spell out how a decision is to be reached on when a President is disabled, nor who should make the decision.

After Eisenhower's proposal was announced Friday, Rep. Keating of New York, senior Republican on the House Judiciary Committee, introduced a bill to provide for a commission to pass on whether a President is disabled. Such a commission would be made up of members of Congress, the Cabinet and the Supreme Court.

There is a difference of opinion over whether the constitutional gap should be plugged by a bill or by a constitutional amendment. And there are those who, like Rayburn, feel there is no need for any action.

Lawson Reenacts St. Louis Slaying

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Police said Jackie Ray Lawson Friday reenacted the killing of 29-year-old Mrs. Credia M. Mallady Friday at her St. Louis apartment after signing a statement for the second time admitting that he was the attractive divorcee's murderer.

Shortly after he was brought here Thursday night from Columbus, Ohio, he repudiated the first confession given to Ohio authorities. But he reversed himself in a hand-written statement.

Lawson has been charged with manslaughter in a warrant signed by the circuit attorney's office.

British Cabinet Split Seen As Lord Salisbury Resigns

LONDON (AP)—The Marquess of Salisbury's resignation protesting release of Greek-Cypriot Archbishop Makarios focussed attention today on a cabinet rift over the government's handling of the explosive Cyprus issue.

The announcement that Salisbury had quit his cabinet post as leader of government forces in the House of Lords came Friday night. Prime Minister Macmillan's office reported that Queen Elizabeth II had accepted his resignation as council president. Salisbury also quit as political controller of Britain's atomic energy development. Macmillan's statement said the Earl of Home, commonwealth relations secretary, will take over as council president and the prime minister himself will assume the atomic energy post.

Informal sources said Salisbury was backed by some other ministers in his opposition to the release of Makarios. Salisbury, a 63-year-old former foreign minister, was believed to have been one of the masterminds in the Conservative Party's efforts to find a successor for Anthony Eden as prime minister.

MACMILLAN was named to the post Jan. 10, two hours after Salisbury had spent 60 minutes talking with the Queen.

In announcing his resignation, Salisbury sent the prime minister a strong note scoring Makarios' release as "neither wise nor timely." He made clear in his letter that he would continue to support Macmillan's government on other issues.

Macmillan expressed "grief" over Salisbury's resignation but stood fast by his government's Cyprus policy and the release of the archbishop. "I am convinced that this act of generous statesmanship will reap its reward," Macmillan said.

From Mahe in the Seychelles Islands where he had been exiled, Makarios said he would refuse to negotiate with Britain to settle the Cyprus rebellion until he is allowed to return to the Mediterranean island. Although free to leave the Seychelles, Makarios is prevented by Britain from returning to Cyprus.

The Greek-Cypriot majority population on Cyprus has demanded that British rule be ended and the island united with Greece.

Roscoe Whiteside, county deputy, reviewed the plans for the annual Grange drill and degree competition held Friday night at Five Points in Pickaway County. Good Will Grange entered a team, but the results were not known at the time the meeting was in progress at Madison Mills.

Following the meeting, the Grangers—plus the juvenile Grangers who held their meeting on the second floor—went to the Bailey Restaurant a few miles east on the CCC Highway for refreshments.

Johnson Rites

Services for John W. Johnson, who died Tuesday at the age of 84, were held at 2 p. m. Friday in the Gerstner Funeral Home. The Rev. Berry Kennedy, pastor of the South Side Church of Christ, officiated.

Mrs. Frank Creamer and Mrs. Charles Hooks sang "In the Garden," and "Precious Lord." Mrs. Marian Gage played the processional and the recessional.

Pallbearers were Herbert Burton, Howard Cochran, Harvey Brown, George Sheely, Claude Kyle and Charles Theobald. Burial was in the White Oak Cemetery, near Bue-na Vista.

Ohio Gasoline Station Men Outline Fears

WASHINGTON (AP)—Some independent Ohio gasoline station operators are complaining that their suppliers are discriminating against them on the price of the things they buy and other matters.

A House small business subcommittee said today the allegations have been numerous enough to justify holding a hearing in Cleveland May 18.

Cleveland will be one of several cities where the subcommittee, headed by Rep. Roosevelt (D-Calif.), will go.

"The complaints have not come just from Cleveland, however," said Joseph L. Nellis, special counsel for the subcommittee.

"We'll also hear from retailers from Cincinnati, Toledo, Dayton, Columbus and Canton."

At this stage, Nellis said, the subcommittee is not stating that the allegations are justified.

But as Nellis described it, Ohio retail operators allege that some big oil companies are:

1. Unfairly cancelling their leases.
2. Making them buy given brands of tires, batteries and accessories instead of makes of their choice from independent firms.
3. Charging them higher prices for gasoline and oil than those given local competitors.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Due to the increase in activity in the Real Estate department of our Agency and the pressing demand of my time in this department, it has become necessary for me to devote more time to this branch of the business.

Jane Coffman, licensed Agent, who has been affiliated with our Insurance Department for the past 15 years, being exceptionally well qualified and having managed the Insurance Department for the past few years, has acquired the interest of this branch of the Agency and will assume active management beginning April 1st.

Additional experienced help has been employed in the Insurance Department, in order to maintain the same courteous service that our policy holders have been accustomed to for the past 29 years. Naturally, I have retained license in the Insurance Department and will be in a position to counsel with you regarding your insurance needs, if you so desire.

Thanking you for your splendid consideration, not only in the past, but also, in the future.

Sincerely,
"Mac" Dews Sr.

Rayburn Advice

The Texan's advice not to send Congress a special letter asking for presidential disability legislation.

Instead, Atty. Gen. Brownell will go before a House Judiciary Subcommittee Monday to spell out the administration proposal.

Rayburn was said to have told the President the country has gotten along very well through the years without special arrangements for temporary succession to the presidency.

The Texan argued that if Eisenhower were to send up a special letter on the subject it would lead to a lot of talk that he is in poor condition and is preparing to relinquish the presidency.

The Constitution provides that the Vice President shall take over the duties of the President in the event of the President's resignation, ouster, death or disability. But it does not spell out how a decision is to be reached on when a President is disabled, nor who should make the decision.

After Eisenhower's proposal was announced Friday, senior Republican of New York, Rep. Keating of New York, senior Republican on the House Judiciary Committee, introduced a bill to provide for a commission to pass on whether a President is disabled. Such a commission would be made up of members of Congress, the Cabinet and the Supreme Court.

There is a difference of opinion over whether the constitutional gap should be plugged by a bill or by a constitutional amendment. And there are those who, like Rayburn, feel there is no need for any action.

Lawson Reenacts St. Louis Slaying

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Police said Jackie Ray Lawson Friday reenacted the killing of 29-year-old Mrs. Credia M. Mallady Friday at her St. Louis apartment after signing a statement for the second time admitting that he was the attractive divorcee's murderer.

Shortly after he was brought here Thursday night from Columbus, Ohio, he repudiated the first confession given to Ohio authorities. But he reversed himself in a hand-written statement.

Lawson has been charged with manslaughter in a warrant signed by the circuit attorney's office.

Army Rather Slow

ONEIDA, N. Y. (AP)—The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers says it has decided against a flood-control project here on the ground that costs would outweigh benefits. But that is OK since the city straightened Oneida Creek seven years ago.
